THE POVERTY PROGRAM IN SOUTHEAST MISSOURI THE OTHER SIDE OF THE COIN

For several months it has seemed that Don Thomason's little group of followers have controlled the Poverty Program in the Bootheel, and have had access to a portion of the press which has gained the most publicity; without an attempt being made to ascertain the truth. The hard core of Thomason followers have seemed to think they alone own the Poverty Program and have taken offense at any attempt to bring to light the many irregularities and mistakes that were being committed - the Kansas City office participated by white-washing and covering up all the mistakes this group made, and placed all the blame on the first elected Administrative Director, Mr. Earl Williams, of Charleston, Missouri, who was following the instructions given to him by Mr. Thomason, or his Kansas City employees - over the telephone, or face to face conversation - seldom in writing, where it would be a matter of record. But now an audit has been filed by one of Mr. Thomason's Regional employees (an auditor from Boston, Mass., sent out to eleven midwestern states) and this audit which was hurriedly presented to the D.A.E.O.C. Board by a representative from Kansas City, last January, but refused to leave a copy with the members of the board, although clearly disclosing the author's hesitancy in criticising anything Kansas City wished covered up, also shows why the opposition to the ruling clique wished to clean house.

The Poverty Program started very quietly in the Bootheel, only a very small portion of the public ever heard of such a movement, and no attempt was made by the ruling group to alert the public at large.

To give some idea of how the thing developed, a contact from Kansas City was sent to New Madrid County, and that county proposed going along, if the program would grant it $5,000.00 to hire one Director, and the County Court would stand the expense of all other necessary employees, etc. At that time a County Superintendent of Schools, who was voted out, by doing away with his office under a recent law, was available and agreed to take on the job for the $5,000.00 per year salary. The man from Thomason's office said they couldn't allow that much, so the County said "forget it" and lost all interest in the program. Then they started bringing in employees from the East and paying some up to $12,000.00.

Now the auditor says there was over $311,000.00, improperly spent, which included double pay for some employees, pay for services never rendered, the purchase of unauthorized equipment, and a host of irregularities. The administrative officials still with DAEOC continue to say all the audit shows is bad bookkeeping - the blame for all of which rests on the shoulders of Earl Williams alone. Hogwash; is the public gullible enough to believe that? With such bad bookkeeping, it is a wonder the auditor came up with as much as he did. Are there more bugs under the rug?

Much has been written about other citizens getting interested in the Poverty Program to use it for political purposes. But it seems that the only person interested in using the program for political purposes is Don Thomason, who, it is reported, wishes to run for a state office. Some say for congress to replace Paul Jones. The truth is that somebody smelled a rat in the wood-pile, and set out to determine if they could discover what was wrong, but they couldn't learn much from the home office of DAEOC, at Portageville, or from the auditor (who later filed his report under date of Dec. 31, 1966) who proclaimed to know nothing. Members of the DAEOC Board, under the law, were entitled to have all the information available. The auditor's report was made to Kansas City only.

Now a new board of directors has been elected, a new Chairman selected, and the process of cleaning house begun. But the old crowd still gets the ear of some of the press, which, it is believed will change its tune, when the full contents of the audit is made available to it. Why doesn't this element of the press insist that Kansas City release the full contents of the audit to the public?

For instance, an assistant director had helped wage a campaign to undermine his superior, Earl Williams, and gone so far as to call Mr. Williams a liar in front of all his staff employees. The official audit shows that this assistant had helped to set up a program at Hayti involving some sort of youth project and had purchased a used bus for transportation through the Chairman of the DAEOC (the audit says for $650.00, but does not mention names, or whether the school board which owned the bus had ever approved the sale) and that over $1,000.00 had been paid to an automobile dealer, then a member of the DAEOC board, for parts, labor, and repairs on the bus - all of which was done direct and by-passed the home office of DAEOC, without its approval, or approval from Kansas City. When Mr. Williams complained of such actions, he aroused the fury of the original clique (although all this was against OEO regulations). The assistant director ended up with $1,050.00 extra pay, to which he was not entitled and should have been

Truce Appeal Greeted

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. AP -- The United States disclosed today that it has accepted U Thant's latest Vietnam peace proposals calling for a general truce. It said it was prepared to begin discussions immediately to work out details.

The U. S. reply to the U.N. secretary - general's proposals was made public shortly after Thant unveiled his plan at a news conference.

The Thant plan envisages a cease - fire to be followed by preliminary talks aimed at convening a new Geneva peace conference.

Thant said he had sent his proposals to all the parties directly concerned on March 14 and that some had replied. He said he did not consider any of the answers as a categorical rejection.

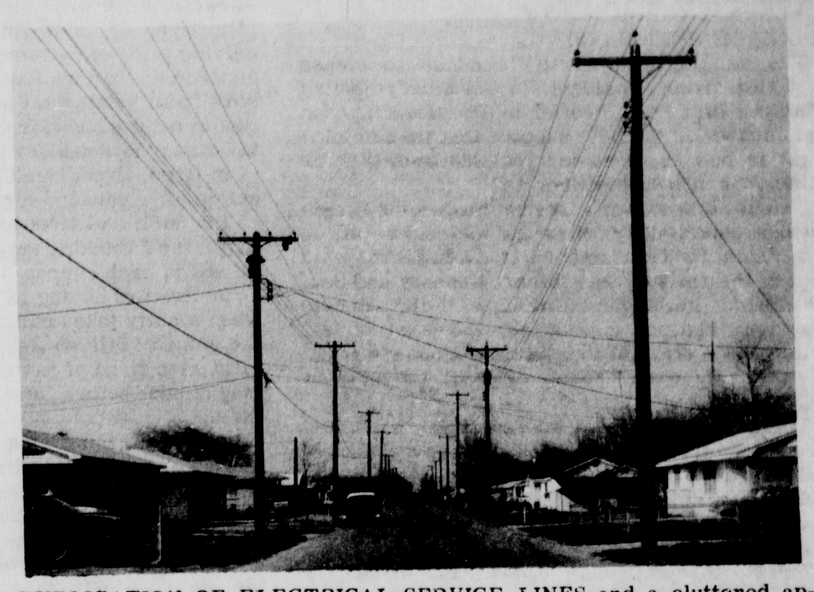

The U.S. note said it was assumed that the government of South Vietnam would be "appropriately involved throughout the entire process."

The secretary - general expressed concern over what he called the recent escalation of the fighting and voiced fears that the conflict might spread unless checked.

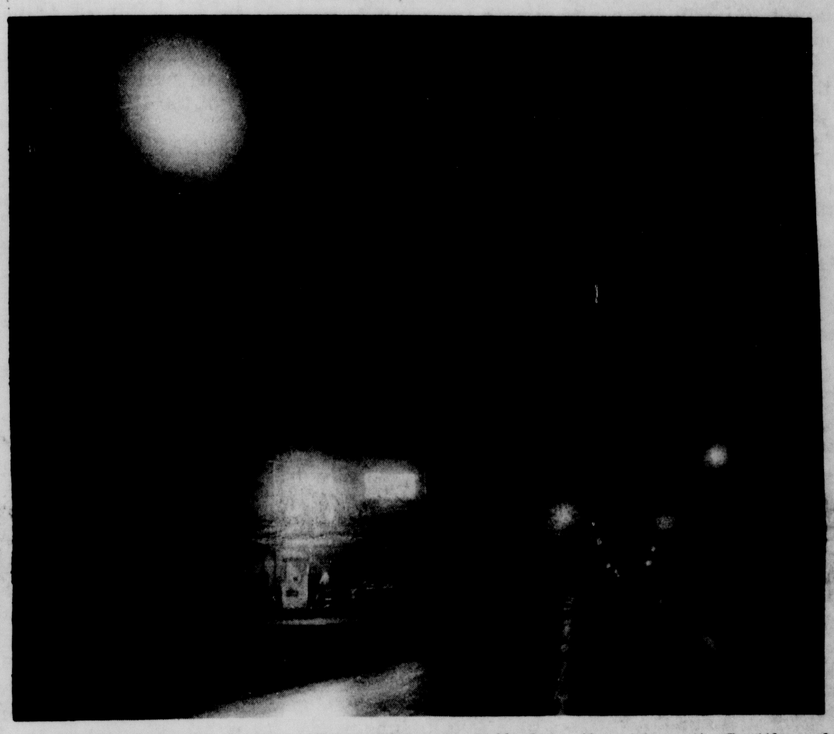

Thant disclosed that he had presented his proposals orally to a North Vietnam delegation on his recent visit to Burma and that he had later sent the plan in a memorandum to others in interested countries.

Thant did not specify which countries had received copies, but informed sources reported earlier that they included the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam, the Soviet Union, Britain, Canada, Poland

NEW MADRID -- Alfred Patton, 37, was arrested Monday afternoon by Sheriff W. L. "Cowboy" Ramsey and charged with possession of stolen property.

Sunday morning the sheriff searched Patton's farm five miles west of Marston and recovered farm implement parts believed to have been stolen from Guy DeLisle of Portageville.

Patton, who had been out on $5,000 bond on charges of possession and selling stolen property, again posted $5,000 bond Monday. He denies any knowledge of the items found on his farm.

He is scheduled to appear before Judge Erie Wright in magistrate court Thursday morning for a preliminary hearing.

Cabbie Tells Of Robbery

A Cape Girardeau man charged with the armed robbery of cab driver in Scott City March 10, was bound over to appear April 13, in circuit court in Benton today after a preliminary hearing in magistrate court.

Ivory Betts, 27, Cape Girardeau, is charged with taking about $20 from Trentis E. Jordon, Cape Girardeau cab driver. Judge M. E. Montgomery presided. Prosecuting attorney Fielding Potashnick represented the state.

Jordon testified that Betts contacted him in Cape Girardeau and asked to be driven to Scott City. When they reached Scott City, Betts directed him to an alley where he (Betts) struck Jordon in the mouth with his fist. He held a knife against Jordon's back and asked for his money, Jordon testified. Jordon said he did not see the knife.

Betts then told Jordon to look away as he left the cab, Jordon said. The cab driver drove to Simpson's Recreation Hall in Scott City and told the owner he had been robbed.

Scott county authorities were notified and deputy Jack Stewart drove to Scott City to investigate. Jordon took Stewart to the alley where the alleged robbery took place and described Betts.

Jordon and deputy Stewart saw Betts near a service station in Scott City and Betts was placed under arrest, Jordon said.

Deputy Stewart testified to the events recounted by Jordon.

The deputy also showed the court a pocket knife found in Betts' possession the night of the arrest, and said he found $19.53 on his person.

Ohioan Apparent Victim of Truck

A body of a man identified as Gordon Zahner, 30, Delaware, Ohio, was found early today near the water's edge of the Mississippi river on the Missouri side of highway 60. He was apparently knocked from the river bridge by a truck.

The man was found by a rescue squad from Missouri and Illinois.

The highway patrol reported that Zahner was driving a 1964 Rambler at 10:30 p.m. Monday east and when rounding a curse, ran off the road into a field. The car was found there.

A man was reported seen staggering across the bridge around 2 a.m. today. No one was found when officers investigated.

The patrol expressed belief Zahner had been struck by a passing truck. He apparently was thrown from the bridge when struck by a truck. A broken truck mirror was found on the bridge nearby.

Coroner Elgin McMikle reported his investigation showed that Zahner was injured when his vehicle left the highway but the major injuries occurred when he was struck by a passing truck's mirror and was thrown over the bridge railing. Zahner suffered a skull fracture and broken bones. Death is believed to have been instantaneous. There was no inquest.

Manchester Book Reveals Worldwide Military Alert

NEW YORK (AP) — Fears of an international plot to overthrow the U.S. government prompted Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to alert every American military base around the world the minute he heard that President John F. Kennedy had been shot in Dallas, Tex., William Manchester says.

"By every readable signal the situation was very red," Manchester writes in his book, "The Death of a President."

The much-disputed book contains 350,000 words of text, plus diagrams, appendices and a list of sources. The price is $10.

McNamara "kept his head and made all the right moves" even before he learned that Kennedy was dead, Manchester says. The worldwide warning told American military commanders, "this is the time to be especially alert."

President Johnson is quoted in the book as saying "there might be war" if Americans became aroused by suspicions that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro had conspired to kill Kennedy.

It was the "wild rumors" about a conspiracy that brought the Warren Commission into existence, Manchester says. The commission, after a long investigation, concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald -- and Oswald alone -- assassinated Kennedy.

Johnson had difficulty persuading Chief Justice Earl Warren to head the inquiry, Manchester says, because Warren opposed "extracurricular activity" by Supreme Court justices.

Manchester quotes Warren as saying: "The President told me how serious the situation was. He said there had been wild rumors and there was the international situation to think of. He said he had just talked to Dean Rusk, (secretary of state) who was concerned. He said that if the public became aroused against Castro and Khrushchev there might be war."

Manchester agrees with the commission's finding. But he

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The decision by the North Vietnamese to release a letter from President Ho Chi Minh rejecting flatly a direct peace offer by President Lyndon B. Johnson is the best support that the administration has received for its conduct of the war since Johnson took office.

The news accounts of the exchange - the President's conciliatory letter and the cold rebuff he got from Ho Chi Minh - has taken all the wind out of the sails of Sen. Robert Kennedy and Sen. William Fulbright, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, and other doves.

Ho played straight into Johnson's hands strange as that may seem. Surely he didn't intend to do it.

There is nothing that President Johnson could have done - and he has tried almost everything - which could have produced the propaganda result so completely and conclusively as did Ho's hard-nosed letter response to Johnson's peace overture.

The North Vietnamese leader spoke eloquently and loudly of his country's disinclination to accept any offer to negotiate short of abject surrender and complete American abandonment of South Vietnam.

Just about everyone in this country, whose opinions on the Vietnam war aren't prejudiced and rigidly held, now believes that President Johnson has been doing all that he reasonably could to begin negotiations with the North Vietnamese.

There is a great deal of evidence suggesting that the Johnson administration is setting out now to win the war in Vietnam as the only satisfactory way to conclude the struggle.

Ho Chi Minh has done more than any person to make this course appear to be justified in the eyes of the American people.

He should tell his people to prepare for the consequences.

Time is running out. The language that guns speak is the only kind that Ho understands. Our answer should be loud and clear.

A TIRED HOUSEWIFE

(A year ago there was reprinted on this page an editorial entitled "I Am a Tired American," written by Alan C. McIntosh, editor of a weekly newspaper in Minnesota. Presented here this week is an article entitled "I Am a Tired Housewife," sent in by Mrs. J. P. Strickland, wife of the assistant principal of a public school in Reno, Nev. It reflects further some of the discontent over different aspects of American life today. - David Lawrence, Editor.)

By Mrs. J. P. Strickland

I am a tired housewife.

I am tired of trying, in this land of abundant food, to balance my budget when milk prices jump three cents on the half-gallon, and meat which was 69¢ per pound goes to 89¢ in just one week's time.

I am tired of staying home while my husband burns the midnight oil studying, so that he can make the next pay step-up - only to find these added earnings gobbled up by increased taxes and rising living costs.

I am tired of "experts" calling conscientious mothers neurotic for insisting that their offspring toe the line.

I'm tired of attorneys and social workers and courts who continue to hand down candy-coated sentences because, they claim, the poor dear hoodlum wasn't brought up in the right environment - an environment that half the world would be envious to share.

I'm tired of the cement deserts swallowing up lovely trees and making pensioners homeless - all in the name of bulldozer-type progress or code-rating accommodations.

I'm tired of hearing of all the "isms" which are supposed to take the place of the ideals and ideas propounded by our God-fearing forefathers, who died that we might be free. I'm tired of having these liberties taken away from my children step-by-step in the name of social benefits.

I'm tired of being told that it's sissy or old hat to believe in God's Way, and that God is dead.

I'm also tired of hearing that Christmas carols shouldn't be part of a school concert.

I'm tired of seeing our police officers ridiculed and criminals exalted during riots and "marches."

I am tired of begging people to help me in the home - then having them turn me down because they might miss an unemployment check.

I am tired of intermittent phone calls during the day and night by some quack who took offense at a letter penned to the local newspaper.

I get especially tired when my youngsters are wakened from naps by this or by advertising or soliciting over my private line.

I'm tired of being told that my work is easy because I have modern appliances in place of a real live maid and that my tiredness from sixteen or more hours of labor in my home is caused by my not having enough outside interests.

In fact, I'm tired of not having time to see perfection in my household tasks because the demands on my time to civic causes take up so many hours, yet accomplish little because of constant bickering over chairmanships or protocol.

I'm tired of texts which my children bring home from school telling how wonderful world government will be and how selfish the U.S.A. is, not to give away everything she has earned by the sweat of her brow.

I'm tired of answering begging calls or receiving piles of "gimmee" mail even after giving generously to the United Fund. My feet are sore from helping out at rummage sales and the like to raise money for things which my husband's tax money is supposed to cover.

I'm tired, tired, tired of the idea that sex education is a panacea for every ill under the sun.

I am sick and tired of the "better" women's magazines thinking they have to have an article on sex in each current issue.

I'm tired of having to run to turn off my radio when smutty jokes come over the air, often under the guise of folk songs.

I'm also tired of having to censor my current magazines before letting my youngsters read them.

I'm tired of improving my property by painting and adding new fixtures, only to have my taxes doubled because of those improvements.

I'm tired of seeing the hurt look in the eyes of my children when they wear half-soled shoes to school while playmates whose parents are "on the dole" get shiny new shoes to flaunt.

I'm tired of seeing people who have saved diligently being penalized for their thrift while the ne're-do-well is coddled with unearned benefits.

Yes, I'm sick and tired of seeing people with initiative and good old Yankee ingenuity pushed around while loafers are being paid to be slothful.

I'm sick of this modern psychology which is so different from the Golden Rule and the Book of Proverbs.

I am tired of seeing this once wonderful God-fearing nation bowing to Satan's whims, but I am not too tired to pray.

BIG SLEEP IN THE HOUSE

State Representatives interested in good government more or less got caught with their "legislative pants down" when it came time to vote on House Bill No. 166 recently. The measure carried the lower chamber at Jefferson City by such a wide margin that there can only be a suspicion that many lawmakers did not read the provisions of the measure.

One of the catch phrases in the measure, designed to "supplement" a 1965 law, requires municipal bodies and other public agencies to engage in negotiations with any labor organization that represents employes. As passed by the House, this means that city council, boards of public works and many other public agencies will be forced, whether they wish to or not, to conduct negotiations with petitioning unions.

A great many Southeast Missourians feel that public agencies should not be forced to negotiate since these bodies represent the taxpayers and not private companies. The funds involved are public tax funds, not private profits as in the case of companies and corporations.

Still another joker in the proposed law is a requirement that issues "shall be resolved" by the State Board of Mediation, a union-dominated state agency.

Passage of House Bill 166 recalls the dismal days of an earlier session when the House and Senate passed Missouri's so-called "prevailing wage" law, which upset, postponed and increased the cost of untold public building projects throughout Southeast Missouri. It appears the House took the same big sleep that an earlier House took on the prevailing wage bill.

Sometimes it isn't a bad idea for lawmakers to read the provisions of pending legislation before they cast their vote.

THE MEANING OF ADVERTISING

It has been truthfully said that economic and political liberty live or die together. By the same token, a free press cannot exist without private enterprise and neither private enterprise nor personal liberty can exist without a free press. If statements such as these seem dogmatic, academic or trite, the pages of the nation's newspapers, periodicals and other publications tell a different story.

In columns of advertising, investor - owned enterprise, big and little, seeks the patronage of the public. A national news magazine recently carried a full - page advertisement over the signature of the president of a major investor - owned electric power system*. The purpose of the advertisement was to call attention to the opportunities for industrial development in its service area.

The power system in question is one of the most progressive in the country, but it is not alone in its drive to develop markets and expand its services to the benefit of the community. Thousands of taxpaying enterprises are pursuing the same course in every section of the United States. Their business - promoting efforts are reflected in the thousands of pages of advertiseing that we see every day in our hometown papers and magazines -- advertising that tells of new products, expanded service and new opportunities.

It is well worthwhile to think of these things when plans are put forth to extend government in business. Socialized industry does not need to advertise because free choice in the marketplace is gone. The customers are captives of a state monopoly. And in countries where socialism is total, the press consists of a few official organs.

FALSE CLAIMS

During the past thirty years or more, the advocates of socialized electric power, in order to put through gigantic tax-exempt federal projects, have used the claim that some jobs were too big for private enterprise. At the same time, the investor-owned electric and gas industry pushed ahead in the face of formidable government competition and made a joke of the notion that private enterprise is not equal to the big jobs. The gas industry this year is celebrating its 150th anniversary. In recent years, it has established a record of spectacular growth. In fact, it is the sixth largest industry in the United States, and supplier of one third of all the energy consumed by the nation.

An investor-owned gas company publication reports that, "Today there are enough miles of (gas) transmission and distribution pipeline in the U.S. to reach from the earth to the moon three times, to serve 38 million customers in the U.S. and to provide more energy in one day than all the hydroelectric power projects in the U.S. produce in a week."

The gas industry, like all other industries developed with the savings and earnings of private citizens, has been a heavy taxpayer to all levels of government from the time the first gas lamp was lit. As a matter of fact, the biggest job in the world today, of private industry and its customers, is to provide tax revenues to the tune of hundreds of billions of dollars to government--which is done ungrudgingly. It is not true that government in business is clothed with unique virtues or ability -- nor that it must be called on to do the really big jobs.

The intern on duty at the hospital emergency room received a phone call late one night from a distressed mother who exclaimed, "Doctor, what shall I do--my husband just discovered that our two-year-old has eaten a whole tube of contraceptive jelly."

"Well," the intern drawled, "if it's really an emergency, why don't you have one of them all-night drugstores deliver?"

FIGHTING WORDS

The Textile Workers Union of America recently asked that President Johnson issue an executive order banning the award of government contracts to an important supplier of vitally needed defnese materials. The reason? A long-standing controversy between the union and the company.

"Tell It to the Judge, Bud!"

Happily, the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee in Washington, Democrat L. Mendel Rivers, is both a patriot and a fighter. The Congressional Record for June 20 carries some fighting words by the Congressman which jump off the page to remind us how precariously intertwined are battles being fought here at home and Vietnam.

"I would like," said Rep. Rivers, "to bring to the attention of the Congress what I consider the real story behind the current controversy between the National Labor Relations Board, the AFL-CIO and J. P. Stevens Co., one of the country's largest textile firms.

"By way of review let me say briefly that this controversy began in 1963 with a massive effort on the part of a group of unions . . . to organize the plants of Stevens.

"It is not my purpose to argue here today the merits of this controversy. Let me just say that in elections held in eight Stevens plants, employees have voted against the union in each and every one of these elections. In one of these plants . . .the NLRB ordered a rerun election . . . the employees went to the polls and voted the union down by a margin twice as large as before.

"This case has been argued in two U. S. district courts and the U. S. court of appeals as the union and the NLRB sought an injunction against the company. Each one of these courts refused to issue such an injunction. . .

"I say to you unequivocally, any individual or group that asks the Federal Government to withhold contracts for vitally needed war materials from a company simply because it has been found by the NLRB to be in violation of the Federal Labor law is acting irresponsibly and without any thought for the welfare of our Armed Forces.

"This is merely a desperate attempt by the AFL-CIO Council to gain, by fiat from our Government, bargaining authority which it has not been able to win in secret ballot elections."

Critical supplies and equipment for Vietnam are involved in this home-front fight. Congressman Rivers thinks that our soldiers take priority over labor bosses. We agree.

A CLASSIC CASE

Recently, a major nickel smelting company was ordered by a U. S. District Judge to reimburse the federal government to the tune of $624,000--including more than $87,000 in interest -- for past overcharges. Said the Judge. "This is a classic case of unjust enrichment. From the dates of overpayments, the company has had the use of the government's money."

Without questioning the wisdom or property of the decision, The Portland Oregonian observed: "An interesting point might be raised. Consider poor Joe Pungle, the wage earner and taxpayer. Each payday Joe's employer withholds some of his paycheck and hands it over to the government. At tax filing time Joe may find too much of his wages have been withheld, and he may apply for a refund. The government has had use of that overpayment for a considerable time at the best interest rates anyone can get -- none. Oregon's Joe Pungles have collected $41,111,954 in refunds in 1966. At a modest return, say six per cent, the interest would have been $2,466,717. How's that for a classic?"

NOW DIG THIS, DANIEL BOONE!

The new note in fashions is furs for men. Yes, FURS FOR MEN!

Cook - skin caps? Fur-lined mittens? A revival of the Joe College raccoon coat circa 1920s?

Don't be uncouth, PLEASE. The new masculine fur pieces are such sophisticated garments as a dinner jacket of black American broadtail at $450, a hip - length coat of red fox fur for $595, or a full-length dream in unplucked beaver for $799.

Or, for cuddly togetherness, his and hers minks for $6,000 the pair.

Sale of such coats is, the Fur Information and Fashion Council happily reports, brisk. Men like them because they are a status symbol and are, of course, warm -- and therefore practical.

So no furred bum should be too flip in cracking wise on the snazzy garments of the real hip fellows who wear them.

Nevertheless, the first guy who appears in public in a fur stole or neckpiece had better come out fighting!

Radio said LBJ called Sen. Brooks and congratulated him on his about-face on the war after his election.

Now if LBJ could explain his about-face on that war as clearly as the Senator did, that would be a political miracle.

H. L. Hunt Says

BEYOND STUDENT SHENANIGANS

College students are traditionally entitled to engage in certain shenanigans, especially as spring approaches. But the "New Left," going beyond shenanigans, is out to seize control of the college system of the United States.

Spokesman for this self-styled New Left is the organization called Student for a Democratic Society. And the purpose of the SDC, according to its national vice president, is to "radically transform" the college community.

This gentleman has written: "What we don't want is a 'company union' student movement that sees itself as a body that helps a parental administration make better rules for us. What we do want is a union of students where the students themselves decide what kind of rules they want or don't want. Or whether they need rules at all."

When and if the New Left gains control, this spokesman goes on to say, it should push through a list of demands "in the form of a bill of rights" with a time limit for the college administration to reply. If the demands are met, the students should celebrate the victory. If they are not met, the students should "immediately begin mass demonstrations, sit - ins, boycott of all classes, and strikes of teaching assistants." One of the first demands, incidentally, would be an end of all grades for students.

Can this happen? Well, it has happened in many colleges and universities in South America, where communists takeover of the educational institutions has followed precisely this line. The communist conspirators always give first attention to capturing the minds of the young. H. L. H.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — "You have to make your own trip to the moon," said Ross Hunter. "There are no free rides."

Hunter is the youthful-looking former high school English teacher who now, as one of Hollywood's most successful producers, is becoming known as "the man with the box office touch."

Of the 36 films he has made since 1952 only two were financial duds, which he feels is something of a record.

"I have made a profit of $167 million for the studio," he remarked.

"Why? Because I don't make pictures for myself. I make them for the public. And what they want is to be entertained.

"Escape is a healthy word. And people are looking for a clean look in entertainment.

"European producers feel they have to give a slice of life. We feel that people get that slice of life in their own homes.

"We're on the upbeat now in Hollywood. European producers are on the downbeat. I feel that if you subject people to a neurotic film about despair, they go back to their homes and watch television, dull as that may be."

His next opus is "The Public Eye," which Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton will get a million dollars each to star in.

Ross used to be an actor himself. After a spell of teaching English in Cleveland, he put in a hitch in the Army, then took a film test and scored high.

He acted in 19 pictures —remember "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" and "Louisiana Hayride"? — and pushed his income up to $1,000 a week. His career was interrupted by an illness that sidelined him for a full year.

When he recovered nobody seemed to remember him. Unable to find work as an actor, Ross returned to teaching at $57.50 a week, spent his evenings studying producing.

"It was the best thing that could have happened to me," he recalled without bitterness. "I don't miss acting, and I don't think the public misses my acting either. I wouldn't be an actor again for anything in the world."

In a few years, as producer, Hunter climbed quickly back up the Hollywood ladder. His films include such hits as "Magnificent Obsession," "Imitation of Life," "Tammy, Tell Me True," "Flower Drum Song," and "Pillow Talk."

Among the stars he helped launch or bring to new peaks of popularity are Rock Hudson, Sandra Dee, Natalie Wood, Doris Day, Lana Turner, Hayley Mills, and Debbie Reynolds.

He is well aware that he's riding an unusual success wave, but says that if he should run into a series of flops he still has a resource available.

"I can always go back to teaching," he said cheerfully.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson, recently returned from South America, todays reports on his interview with the President of Chile.)

SANTIAGO -- President Eduardo Frei Mantalva of Chile is probably the most compulsive builder in Latin America, and when you ask him about his building his eyes sparkle and his hands gesture expressively.

Frei is building not merely houses but a nation. Today Chile is pushing, promoting, building more than at any other time in its history, and President Frei, with his Christian Democratic party, has been responsible, setting an example for all Latin America.

I talked to Frei in his office looking out over the Plaza De La Constitucion. Over his heavy mahogany desk hung a portrait of Bernardo O'Higgins, the George Washington of Chile. On the desk were a few working papers. Deep - set window sills led out to a balcony overlooking the square. And on a little telephone table was a miniature telephone keyboard identical with that of LBJ's.

President Frei has a lot in common with LBJ, as I discovered in talking with him. They are both ex - school teachers, both strong for education, both pushers for agriculture, land conservation and housing. Both, furthermore, are tall and thin.

"I was hoping to see President Johnson before April 15 when the summit conference opens," President Frei told me. "I know we would have had a lot in common. I hope to see him later in the year on a state visit."

"Tell me about your revolution without a firing squad," I asked, referring to Frei's sweeping social and economic reforms.

REVOLUTION WITHOUT FIRING

"Our chief accomplishment is education," President Frei replied, speaking English slowly and carefully. "The UNESCO in Paris cited us for having 96 per cent literacy, higher I think than any other country in the world.

"Revolution doesn't have to take the form of bloodshed and disorder. Building schools is the spirit of our revolution.

"In January and February," Frei continued, referring to the summer vacation in South America, "university students have gone south to build our schools. The government has furnished the window frames, the lumber, the locks, but the students have got the community started and they have done the rest.

"We have also increased students in our secondary schools by 40 per cent, and we have increased the basic term of education from six to eight years. Next year we will extend it to nine years.

"And we have served a million breakfasts in the public schools, together with 500,000 luncheons," said President Frei, "in part thanks to food from the United States."

The President of Chile went on to talk about the next goal of the Christian - Democratic Revolution --housing.

"Here we have not done as well as we should," he said frankly. "We plan to build 60,000 houses every year, but the cost of education may be too great. The past administration built 20,000 houses a year, and we have built, between 1964 - 1966, 45,000 houses each year. Probably we will build 55,000 this year. I am not sure. We hope to do better.

"Along with this housing program we have brought in water, lighting, built communal buildings which have laundries and libraries, and we have installed playgrounds and marketing facilities. Housing projects never had these before.

"The third goal of our revolution is health. We have organized 900 mobile health centers; we have trained nurses; and we have given, in 1966, 190 million liters of milk to mothers. In the last administration there was given only 88 million liters of milk. We have pledged 240 million for 1967. CHILE'S TOUGHEST PROBLEM

"The fourth point in our program is agrarian reform," said the President, "and this is why I could not come to the United States. That was the punishment given to me, that I could not see President Johnson -- all because of land reform."

President Frei referred to the fact that his bitterest opposition comes from the landed aristocracy in the so-called Chilean "establishment". Frei is the first President of Chile in history to take on the establishment. In neighboring Peru, where a dozen or so families own 80 per cent of the land, there has been only a small start toward land reform; but, in Chile, President Frei is in dead earnest.

"The land reform bill just passed the senate yesterday. Maybe I'll have to veto one part of it, but it will go into effect soon.

"We have another problem in connection with the land," he said, "erosion. Frankly, erosion is a greater calamity than earthquakes. This is because Chile is long and narrow, and the rivers rush down from the mountains directly into the sea. This rush of water through the centuries has been wearing our land away.

"So we have been planting trees. The last administration planted 25 million trees a year, but two days after I took office we started a program of 125 million trees the first year and 200 million the next year.

"I told the army, 'you must help,' and the army was enthusiastic. So were the students and the local communities. 'we will give you the trees,' I said. 'You can plant them'."

"Lady Bird would be pleased," I remarked.

"Someday I hope she can come to Chile and see what we are doing." So spoke the dynamic President of Chile regarding his "revolution without a firing squad."

More on President Frei's goals and problems will follow shortly.

The young lieutenant, fresh from ROTC and very green, had been in the Air Force only a few months before he began to rip it apart. He was assigned to an office where his desk adjoined that of a mild-mannered and somewhat elderly captain. This individual soon became the target for all the lieutenant's complaints.

Everything was wrong, according to him. The food at the club was bad. Living conditions were deplorable. The pay, compared to what he could get in civilian life, was terribly inadequate. Worst of all, his job offered nothing challenging to a man of his ability.

"It's disgraceful how the Air Force wastes money," he said one day. "Imagine. A man of my ability stuck here. Why, an idiot could do my work."

Training Is Modernized

WOODSTOCK, Md. (AP) — The modernization movement in Roman Catholicism is reflected in the radical changes in training of priests at Woodstock College, one of the nation's foremost Jesuit seminaries.

Once the seminarians were virtually isolated in the rolling hill country 20 miles west of Baltimore. Their training was dominated by a theological system devised in the Middle Ages by St. Thomas Aquinas. And they conformed to a rigid schedule, from arising at a certain time to going to bed at a certain time. But no more.

Woodstock's president, the Very Rev. Felix F. Cardegna, said the changes here are simply a reflection of the modern age, something he said can be seen in other denominations as well as in Roman Catholicism.

Father Cardegna said that it was recognized that former methods did not equip priests to deal adequately with the problems of people who needed guidance. To help inform priests of social problems, Woodstock added a course called "Sociology of the Church."

Another new course is "Religious Anthropology," which explores the relation of religion to the cultural activities of man. Yet another new course is "The Problem of God," which includes inquiry into various modern theories, among them the "God is dead" viewpoint.

Teacher of this course, which surely would have been taboo in past times, is the Rev. John C. Murray, chief writer of the decree on religious liberty approved by the Ecumenical Council, Vatican II.

Protestant theology and the Protestant role in ecumenism also are studied.

"These days," said Father Cardegna, "the whole of theology has to be ecumenical or it's nothing. And it has to be in contact with the social problems and daily needs of people."

Of the 72 courses offered, 21 are elective. Seminarians have been going outside the school for some time to engage in social welfare work, but recently this activity has been greatly expanded.

Some students visit Baltimore each week to work in slum neighborhoods. Other seminarians pay regular visits to two nearby state mental hospitals. Others visit Protestant churches and synagogues to explain Catholicism.

Filly Elephant Separated From Love

LOS ANGELES AP - For that filly elephant at the new Los Angeles Zoo, it was a case of love's labours lost.

The 3-year-old gray gal, enamored of a newly arrived young male African elephant closeted in the next pen, took matters into her own hands - or trunk, and tried to join him, by force.

Zoo keepers report she got halfway over the wall -- and stuck there.

Wedged tightly between boulders she'd used for climbing, the unnamed African girl pachyderm could only bellow her dismay.

And she kept bellowing, and bellowing, and bellowing, until an ear - sore crew of keepers and security guards worked her free.

She remains today in her own pen - - love unrequited.

I will always seek to discover the best and strongest points in my brother's behavior.
I will give him credit for sincerity.
I will try to avoid classifying him and assuming that he has all the characteristics of the class into which I am tempted to put him.
I will emphasize our agreements.
When others criticize, I will try to bring our favorable points.
Where there is misunderstanding, either I of him or he of me, I will go to him directly.
I will seek opportunities to pray together.
I will try to remember . . . that God's truth is too big for any one mind.
I will pray for those with whom I differ.

Nursery School Has Egg Hunt

The Kiddieland nursery school held its annual Easter egg hunt and party for the enrollees Thursday.

The children made their Easter baskets, a bunny box, to hold their eggs. Wednesday they dyed the eggs, each one putting his name on one egg.

The children were divided into two groups, three and four-year-olds, and five and six-year-olds, for the hunt. Russell Murphy was the winner in the older group and Teresa Carmack and Sandra Reid were runners-up.

Cindy Lawrence was the winner in the younger group.

Visitors for the day were David Fales and Teresa Burton.

Reesa and Darren Bailey, LaVonne Downey and Andy Rodgers were absent.

JERRY STOVALL, St. Louis Cardinals defensive safety, will speak at the Methodist Mens club father-son banquet tomorrow night at 6:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn.

JO JO WHITE, a junior guard from St. Louis, was voted Kansas University's most valuable player by the baksetball team Monday.

White will receive the Phog Allen Award, which was established last year in honor of the long-time KU coach.

The team also elected Ron Franz, senior forward from Kansas City, Kan., captain of the team for the past season.

TWO BASKETBALL PLAYERS from Valmeyer High School, Valmeyer, Illinois have recently signed athletic scholarships to Three Rivers Junior College in Poplar Bluff. Valmeyer was one of the outstanding teams in the Southern Illinois area this year as they finished the season with a 20 won, 4 lost record. They finished in a tie with Marissa High School for the Chartres Conference Title.

The two boys that will be vieing for a spot on the Three Rivers basketball team next year are Tom Fults, 6'6" center and Terry Crouch, 6'0" guard.

Missouri's wild turkey hunters are increasing in numbers each year as is the territory in which they hunt. Many years of effort, re-stocking and development of proper habitat by the Missouri Department of Conservation and cooperation of Missouri citizens and landowners has restored the "King of the Game Birds" to hunting prominence in the show-me-state.

During a five-day season in 1966, over 4,000 hunters stalked the wily gobblers in 29 countries, with 576 returning home with a trophy. Thus, about one of every eight turkey hunters was successful.

The 1967 season has been lengthened by two days and will run April 24 through 30. Also, three more countries have been added to the hunting territory. In addition, Missouri turkey hunting will be open to non-residents of the state for the first time in recent history.

Regulations for this year, as in the past, allow only one male turkey to be taken by shotgun or longbow, without the use of dogs, recorded calls or live decoys, between the hours of 5:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon (Central Standard Time). Turkey hunting permits are required and will cost $5 for resident and $25 for non-residents, plus a 30-cent service fee in each case. These permits will go on sale about April 1st.

Checking stations will be maintained in each of the open counties and again, successful hunters must check their birds with plumage intact between 7:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. on the day they were killed. However, this year, turkeys may be checked in the county where killed, or adjacent county provided it is an open turkey hunting county.

ANOTHER BANNER fishing season is shaping up at Duck Creek Wildlife Management Area here, with a report of more than 11,000 fish taken in one early-March weekend.

Dan Dickneite, area manager, said more than 3,000 anglers, many from as far away as St. Louis, fished the area during the weekend. Of the 11,000 fish caught, about 80 per cent were crappie weighing from eight ounces to two pounds. The rest were mainly largemouth bass, most of them weighing from 10 ounces to a pound and a half with at least two going five pounds.

Last season the anglers at Duck Creek made news nearly every weekend with stories of large strings of crappie, oversize bass and fishing methods that were unusual to cope with Duck Creek's unusual challenges. As in the past, fishermen wishing to try Duck Creek angling for the first time can prepare themselves for big catches and big bass -- but they must also be prepared for shallow water and usually, a lot of moss on the surface.

The shallow water and the covering of moss have resulted in development of a strange-looking procedure for bass fishing. The bass lie under the vegetation, and to get to them the fishermen have to drag weedless lures across the moss. The bass sees the shadow of the lure-- a spoon or a pork frog or something similar -- and blasts a hole in the weeds to get to it. Many times the angler will miss the mossy strike, but when he connects he has a real fight on his hands, landing bass and moss together.

Moss growth will come later in the year. Right now, methods are more nearly normal, although catching may be phenomenal.

Winners Shatter Century Mark

KWOC of Poplar Bluff shot into a 25-0 first quarter lead and continued to an 109-32 romp over Vanduser. Joe Scott was the big gun for the KWOC's.

Advance followed PB's victory with a 114-72 win over Lilbourn and Parma ended the night with a 125-72 victory over United Parcel service of Sikeston.

First round action continues tonight starting at 6 p.m. when Wardell and Kennett meet, followed at 7:30 p.m. by the Gray Ridge-Morley game. Ending the night's activity will be the Portageville and Hayti game at 9 p.m.

The first game of the tournament almost turned into a forfeit but late players for Vanduser arrived and KWOC quickly raced into the lead with fast break baskets and never trailed. Such former high school and college standouts as Wilfong, Cradic, Sifford, Richmond, Scott, Wilkerson and Hoover were members of the Poplar Bluff squad.

Sherry led the Vanduser squad with 10 points.

Advance struggled through the first quarter against Lilbourn, holding only a 23-16 lead but opened up the second period with 34 points while holding Lilbourn to 16 and was on its way to victory.

Nick Lamford led the Advance scoring with 24 points. Teammates Pete Townsend and Doyle Mabry added 22 and 21 points respectively in assured victory.

Lavern Garner's 40 points led the Parma quintet to its first round victory over United Parcel Service.

Parma pulled to a 28-16 first quarter lead and raced to a 65-29 lead at intermission.

Dwight Turner added 28, Larry Ransom 23 and Vivan Reed 21 to Parma's scoring.

Hearnes Announces Transfer

JEFFERSON CITY - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today announced the transfer of Elephant Rocks, a renowned natural scenic feature in Iron County, from the Department of Conservation to the Missouri Park Board.

The transfer was approved by the Conservation Commission in session here Friday.

The Conversation Department received the 135-acre tract last December as a gift to the people of Missouri from Dr. and Mrs. John S. Brown of Towson, Md. The tract includes huge granite boulders, many resembling elephants, from which the area takes its name. The feature is a popular tourist attraction, and also attracts geologists and other scientists. Dr. Brown said he wanted the property in public ownership so it could be properly cared for and preserved.

Director Carl R. Noren of the Conservation Department said the area is much more suitable for management as a park than as a wildlife area, and pointed out that the Park Board is in a better position to provide park-type management for public use of the area.

Gov. Hearnes said he welcomed the move as an example of continuing cooperation between these two agencies, as well as other related state agencies, in the interest of improved recreational opportunities for Missouri.

Park Board Director Joseph Jaeger, Jr., said the transfer will accomplish what Dr. and Mrs. Brown wanted when they made the gift last year - the best management of the area for the public use to which it is best suited.

The ability to have our own way, and at the same time convince others that they are having their own way, is rare among men. Among women it is as common as eyebrows.

DeWitz Appointed Basketball Assistant

COLUMBIA -- Roy DeWitz, former all-conference guard at Kansas State University, will become assistant basketball coach at the University of Missouri April 1, Chancellor John W. Schwada announced today.

DeWitz, coach at Augustana College at Sioux Falls, S. D., last year, will replace Glenn Cafer, whose resignation was announced last week. He was recommended by Norman Stewart, who became head coach in basketball this month.

Chancellor Schwada said that DeWitz' appointment has been approved by the Executive Board of the Board of Curators.

DeWitz, 31, was assistant basketball coach for the Kansas State Wildcats for two years and head coach at Manhattan, Kan., high school for six years. In high school coaching he had a 91-36 record. His Augustana team last season earned a 13-12 record, after a 1-21 season a year earlier.

As a Wildcat player, DeWitz was a fifth district N.C.A.A. all-American during his senior competition in 1957-58 and received honorable mention as an all-American choice. He was selected as the Wildcat's "most inspirational player" that year, and participated in two East-West college all-star games.

DeWitz, a second round draft choice of the Detroit Pistons, bypassed professional play to enter the coaching field. He is married and the father of one daughter, Christy, 2.

Marichal Signs Six-Figure Contract

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer

But the Giants' reserve catcher prefers the view from behind the plate . . . and the farther he hits, the closer he gets.

Hiatt led off the 10th inning Monday with a towering home run, giving San Francisco a 3-2 exhibition victory over the California Angels . . . who dealt him to the Giants in 1964 for outfielder Jose Cardenal.

Marichal, meanwhile, showed up at the Giants' Phoenix, Ariz., camp, signed his first six-figure contract and promised he'll be ready to pitch in the April 11 season opener at St. Louis. The Dominican right-hander, a 25-game winner in 1966, was the last of this year's holdouts.

"I feel I'm in good condition and ready to go right to work," said Marichal, who'll likely made his first spring appearance Friday against the Angels.

Hiatt, a 24-year-old Californian who also plays first base and the outfield, connected off Angels right-hander Jim Coates in the 10th, snapping a 2-2 deadlock.

Hiatt got into 18 games with the Giants last season and hit .304 after spending most of the year with Phoenix in the Pacific Coast League, where he had a .270 mark and 13 homers.

The long ball made the difference in three other games on Monday's exhibition schedule. Sam Bowens' three-run homer lifted Baltimore past Washington 4-3, two tainted homers gave Pittsburgh a 5-4 nod over Los Angeles and Atlanta cracked five homers in trimming Boston 6-1.

The Chicago White Sox downed the New York yankees 12-7 in a 31-nit struggle, Houston edged Minnesota 7-6 on Dave Adlesh's RBI single in the 12th inning, Cincinnati whipped St. Louis 7-4, the Chicago Cubs edged Cleveland 5-4 and the Kansas City-Philadelphia game ended in a 2-2 tie when rain stopped play after nine innings.

A scheduled night game between the New York Mets and Detroit Tigers was washed out by rain.

Bowens connected off Washington's Camilo Pascual, who was making his first exhibition appearance, following two walks in the seventh inning. Pascual had doubled home a run in the top of the inning to give the Senators a 2-1 lead.

Dodgers' center fielder Jim Hickman missed a shoestring bid for Andre Rodgers' liner with two on in the fifth inning and it went for an inside-the-park homer. Willie Stargell's sixth-inning shot tipped left fielder Bob Bailey's glove and went over the fence for a two-run homer that won it for the Pirates.

Felipe Alou, Denis Menke, Mack Jones and Rico Carty all homered for Atlanta off ex-Brave Hank Fisher and Clete Boyer rapped a two-run homer in the eighth against Dan Osinski, another former Brave.

The White Sox rapped out 17 hits and battered Mel Stottlemyre for five runs in the eighth inning to outscore the Yankees. Triples by Ken Berry and Tom McCraw sparked the deciding rally.

Don Lock's ninth-inning homer pulled the Phillies even with Kansas City before the rains came.

Clay May Be 16 Away

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston draft board spokesman says the normal churning of administrative machinery could produce an Army private named Cassius Clay 16 days from now if the heavyweight champ's court fights with the Selective Service system fail.

Clay's draft board in Louisville, his old home town, said Monday it had granted his request for induction into the Army in Houston, his new home town. His old orders told him to report in Louisville on April 11.

Clay's managers announced a suspension of talks about future title defenses and, as Muhammad Ali, Black Muslim minister, Clay remained in Dallas, recruiting converts for Allah.

He paused to tell reporters, "If I thought it would bring freedom, justice and equality for 22 million so-called Negroes, you wouldn't have to draft me. I'd join tomorrow."

The induction switch from Louisville to Houston meant an automatic delay described as "indefinite," but Mrs. Josie W. Koonce, chief clerk for all Houston draft boards, said that "indefinite" under law meant a minimum of one day and probably will mean no more than three weeks or a month at most.

She said it is up to the Army now to decide whether or not it will accept Clay from among the other Houston draftees and out-of-town draftees sent its way.

"As far as I've found, there's no reason why he won't be inducted," she said. "We don't know what dates we have on our calls. Some calls are in April, but our calls are small now."

"Golfers Tee Off Wednesday."

Bulldog golfers will travel to Poplar Bluff on Wednesday to open the 1967 season. The Dogs will go against the Mules at Westwood Hills Country Club.

This first match will be one of the toughest of the year because of the keen competition to be faced. The Mules will have most of last year's team back including "Beto" Jett, a senior who won the district match his sophomore year.

Last year the Bulldogs fell to the Mules, 173-165, but the Dogs will be fighting hard to bring a victory in their first match.

The dual meet will begin around 3:30 p.m.

Restraints Bewilder U.S. Pilots in Vietnam

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, gave a vivid report Sunday on some of the things that American troops in Vietnam are saying about the way the war is being run from Washington.

He said, as one example, that American pilots are bewildered by rules imposed in Washington forbidding them to attack Communist aircraft on the ground or to bomb Communist air bases.

The pilots told him that highly advanced Russian-build MIG fighter planes are given immunity on the ground and then take to the air to fire at American planes from the rear, the senator said.

Many American casualties have been caused by these limitations, and many bombing missions have been abandoned in flight so that American planes would have a better chance of defending themselves against the MIGs, the senator said.

"All the commanders in the field have recommended that we hit the airfields," an American pilot told the senator at an American base.

Symington filed a detailed report with the Senate on his year-end trip through southeast Asia, the Middle East, and southern Europe.

The most compelling part consisted of verbatim interviews with men doing the actual fighting.

Under his questioning, many airmen expressed their perplexity over Washington's "rules of engagement," which often force the Americans to fight under the most difficult conditions.

The interview with an unidentified pilot went like this:

Symington: Have any of you been near enemy airfields?

PILOT: Twenty times I've been across the Phuc Yen airfield not far from Hanoi. No one of us has ever dropped a bomb on it.

We see a MIG-21 taxi out and takeoff, then the next thing you know, he's at your six o'clock (directly in the rear).

They (the Communist) are well trained, well disciplined, and carry out excellent maneuvers. Within the last couple of weeks, there's been a marked increase in their activity, a hell of a lot more of them.

They coordinate their attacks well - fly right through their flak - and then they are right there in formation with us when we are about to start our attacks.

Symington: How many missions do you have?

Individual pilots: 79,55, 52, 75, 40, 39, 36, 15, 93, 70.

Symington: Do the MIGs knocked down any of our aircraft with air-to-air missiles?

Pilot: Yes.

Symington: What kind of missiles?

Pilot: Beam rider. Went right up his tail pipe and broke the aircraft in two.

Symington: Do you think that if you could hit those MIGs in their revetments (on the ground), you could get them?

Pilot: Yes, and we'd like to put some holes in their runway while they're airborne too.

Symington: What reason do they give you for not doing this?

Pilot: Escalation, sir. But the enemy already has escalated the war in the air.

Symington: What ever happened to my friend Colonel Nelson whom I talked with out here this time last year? He was the vice commander here.

Pilot: Colonel Nelson got it on his 77th mission. He was after a truck.

Symington: The tenor has changed lately as a result of increased MIG activity, but you've not gone after airfields. Why?

Pilot: No reason given. All the military commanders in the field have recommended that we hit the airfields.

Symington: But you don't attack the airports. What effect has this had?

Pilot: They (the Communists) know we aren't doing anything about them, so they operate accordingly.

At another base, Sen. Symington said in his report, "two pilots told me that the greatest proof of the morale and discipline of the U.S. Air Force was that nobody yet had dumped a lot of bombs unintentionally on Phuc Yen, where they saw MIGs wheeling into line to get behind them and attack them from the rear."

The senator's own appraisal of the prohibition against hitting the MIGs on the ground: "It just doesn't make sense."

The only effective way to destroy an enemy air force, he said, is to "destroy him on the ground."

There is nothing more base than to find fault with that which thou dost not understand. That view vilifies everything; it produces but bitterness and discord. Therefore, let us candidly interpret other men's work and not esteem our own as oracles, nor look upon the judgments of those men who do not understand what they read. Where there is hatred in judgment, judgment is blind.

CONGRESSIONAL PLAN SHIFTS OUTSTATE MISSOURI

JEFFERSON CITY -- Outstate Missouri would be shifted around in major proportions under a much worked-over congressional reapportionment bill which was reported out of Sen. Omer Avery's reapportionment committee last week.

Senate Majority Leader William B. Waters (D-Liberty) said the bill would be given top priority after the Legislature's Easter vacation, which began last Thursday for the Senate.

Under the proposal, the Eighth District undergoes the greatest realignment, losing 7 counties and gaining three St. Louis townships -- those of Bonhomme, Lemay and Meramec-- and Howard and Osage counties.

This district, now represented by Rep. Richard H. Ichord (D-Houston), would lose the counties of Boone, Shannon, Reynolds, Carter, Iron, Madison and Saline.

Under the committee proposal, which is a revised version of Sen. Avery's original reapportionment bill, the Fourth District would be composed of Wards 15 and 24 in Kansas City and the following townships in Jackson County: Washington, Blue, Brooking, Fort Osage, Van Buren, Prairie and Sni-A-Bar; and the following counties: Bates, Cass, Vernon, Henry, Johnson, Lafayette, Saline, St. Clair, Carroll, Chariton and Pettis.

The Ninth District would be comprised by the counties of: Schuyler, Scotland, Clark, Knox, Lewis, Shelby, Marion, Randolph, Monroe, Ralls, Audrain, Pike, Callaway, Boone, Montgomery, Lincoln, Warren, Gasconade, Franklin and St. Charles, and the following townships in St. Louis County: Spanish Lake and Florissant.

The Seventh District would be comprised of the following counties: Benton, Barton, Jasper, Newton, McDonald, Cedar, Dade, Lawrence, Barry, Polk, Greene, Christian, Stone, Taney, Dallas, Webster, Douglas, Ozark, Wright and Hickory.

The revised plan would allow Sen. Earl Blackwell (D-Hillsboro) to run against Rep. Ichord, as he said he would like to, and would open up a wider area of contenders for the Tenth District seat, when Rep. Paul Jones retires after this term.

TENTATIVE APPROVAL GIVEN TO STATE FAIR FUND BILL

The House has given tentative approval to a bill which would allow admission charges to the Missouri State Fair to be raised to one dollar -- rather than the present maximum of 50 cents.

In an effort to bring the State Fair out of past financial difficulties, the bill also would allow the Commissioner of Agriculture to rent the State Fair buildings and grounds for other uses when the fair is not being held.

Formerly these buildings have had to remain idle nearly 11 months out of the year with no revenue coming from them.

BILL WOULD REQUIRE 'TARPING' TRUCK LOADS

How often have you been driving down the highway when a rock has fallen from a gravel truck in front of you, cracking or chipping your windshield?

The Missouri House is seeking to remedy this and similar situations and has given tentative approval to a bill which would require trucks and trailers to cover any loads which might blow off the vehicle.

It also would make it a misdemeanor to violate the provisions of the bill.

BILL MAKES ARSON IN FORESTS A FELONY

Conservationists and sportsmen alike have lauded the passage by the Missouri House of Representatives a bill which would make it a felony to wilfully start a forest fire.

With the increase of the timber industry in missouri, the destruction of such forests can amount to several thousands of dollars in damages, let alone the loss of animal life and refuge.

The former penalty was only a misdemeanor. The current bill, if passed by the Senate, would provide for a 90-day to one-year sentence in a county jail, or from two to five years in a state prison.

BILL WOULD ALLOW ELDERLY TO LIVE WITH RELATIVES

The Missouri House has given tentative approval to and is expected to pass a bill which would allow elderly citizens, over 65 and receiving pension benefits from the state, to live with their relatives -- making their present income the only basis for determining the amount of pension payments.

This bill would apply to those receiving state benefits who are incapacitated from working.

Scott AFB Trains Air Rescuemen

SCOTT AIR FORCE BASE, Ill. (AP) — Airman 2.c. Malcolm C. Hassler is a parachutist, frogman, fireman, medic, mountain climber and survival expert.

The 22-year-old airman from Peoria, Ill., and other pararescuemen like him helped save the lives of 403 downed allied airmen in Vietnam in 1966.

Pararescuemen are the hub of the Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service, a division of the military airlift command which has headquarters at Scott Air Force Base in southern Illinois near St. Louis.

These men, who wear maroon berets and train by parachuting into pine trees, go into the jungles and seas to prepare crashed airplane crews for rescue. They administer first aid, fight sharks and hold off the Viet Cong or North Vietnamese soldiers with small arms fire while the rescue is in progress.

At last count, air rescuemen in Vietnam had won 1,800 awards and decorations for work under fire. The 38th Aerospace Rescue Squadron and its 3rd Rescue and Recovery group have received presidential unit citations.

In addition to going down directly to the men who need help, the pararescuemen also operate the hoists used to pluck airmen from calm seas.

For his rescue work Hassler was named military airlift command's outstanding airman for 1967. He is a crew member on a HH-3 Jolly Green Giant helicopter used to recover pilots down in Southeast Asia.

Another pararescueman is 34-year-old Chuck Walther of Parkersburg, W. Va., who recently completed a year's duty at Bien Hoa. During the period he collected 13 medals for courage and professionalism under combat conditions.

Walther said that in Viet Nam it's "hard to tell the good guys from the bad guys. They don't wear white hats and black hats."

Another danger rescuemen must face is exploding shells from burning aircraft. "those 20 milimeter shells cook-off for many hours," Walther said. "When they go, it's just like a hand grenade. At Bien Hoa a fireman standing between two of my pararescuemen was killed by an exploding 20 milimeter."

Capt. John B. Kneen, 31, of Belvidere Center, Vt., pilots a rescue helicopter.

Kneen said every rescue of a downed airman is a race between the Viet Cong and the rescuers to the crash site.

Jimmy Vest on Select List

HENDERSON, Tenn. -- Jimmy Vest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Vest, 806 Brawley, Sikeston, Mo., has been selected by a committee of faculty, administration and students to be included in Who's Who at Freed-Hardeman College.

Vest, a third-year student, is a Bible major.

Selection is based on the student's academic record, leadership, participation in extra-curricular activities, citizenship and promise of future usefulness.

Dentist Explains Programs for School Children

POPLAR BLUFF -- At a meeting of public health nurses Dr. Ralph Knowles of Jefferson City, public health dentist, pointed out that dental defects in school children have been considered the most perplexing of all school health problems.

He said only six out of 23 counties in district 4 of the Missouri division of health employ public health dentists, either working from an office in the county health center or from mobile units.

The public dental program is possible only in counties paying county or city taxes for pubhealth services. These counties are New Madrid, Bollinger, Ripley, Wayne Reynolds and ron, Dr. Knowles pointed out.

There are a variety of sources of funds for county dental programs. One source now used frequently is the federal government acting through Title I of the primary and secondary education act, Dr. Knowles said.

Under this act, each school receives an amount of money based on family income and the number of aid to dependent children recipients in the school.

There are also many state plans for reimbursing counties for money spent on dental programs, he pointed out.

Sometime before 1975, Dr. Knowles said, the state must provide "comprehensive dental services" to ADC families and other low income individuals.

He pointed out that a new bill has been introduced which will provide funds for dental programs through the Social Security Administration.

The average cost to the county for dental services is $15,400 yearly, depending on the type of equipment used and the type of service, Dr. Knowles concluded.

Poverty War Reviewed Secretly

PORTAGEVILLE -- The board of directors of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Commission will meet here Wednesday night to review the dismissal of Bill Graves, assistant director of the DAEOC, and Lloyd Phillips, director of the Head Start program.

The pair was dismissed two weeks ago on the basis of an audit of DAEOC's program taken a year ago by OEO officials from Kansas City. At the time Graves and Phillips were assistants to director Earl Williams. Just before the audit took place, Williams was dismissed by the board for incompetency.

The OEO audit revealed that the administration of the program was not on the level it should have been. Irregular administrative procedures, including the practice of dual employment, were cited by regional officials as reasons for the poor report.

Shortly thereafter, Graves and Phillips met with officials of the regional office, and cleared up the matter of dual employment. Reports later showed Graves had not been implicated in the situation, and Phillips' stand was clarified to the point where OEO officials recommended no further action be taken.

In identical letters requesting the hearing, Graves and Phillips pointed out to directors that they were not administrative heads of DAEOC during the period covered by the regional audit, and also challenged the validity of the board that dismissed them.

The letters also asserted impropriety, political and otherwise, in the dismissal action. "Inasmuch as no reason whatever has been stated. . .and inasmuch as I have committed no act or omission which could give cause for my dismissal, such dismissal must have been for political or other improper cause.

Bob Edwards, president of the DAEOC board of directors, said Saturday the meeting Wednesday night would be a secret meeting of the directors and would be closed to the public.

Earlier Edwards had indicated that he strongly favored having the hearing open. "The poverty program is a public matter, and there should be no secrets in it."

John H. Scott at Convention

John H. Scott attended the annual convention of the American Personnel and Guidance Association in Dallas Sunday through Thursday. Scott is a counselor at the Multi Occupation Facility in the public schools.

Jackson Defeats School Bond

JACKSON -- The $495,000 bond issue of Jackson R-2 school district was defeated for a second time in balloting Thursday.

The voter turn-out was larger than on the first election Feb. 28 and this time failed to give the issue a simple majority, 595-604.

Highway Litter Costs $11 per Mile to Remove

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - It cost more than $11 a mile to pick up the litter along 32,000 miles of the Missouri highway system last year, the State Highway Department reported today.

Total cost was $360,160. Tossing litter from automobiles to the roadside is a misdemeanor but it gets done anyway.

The pickup job ranged from a high of $81,726 for District 7, with headquarters at Joplin, to $13,014 for comparatively tidy District 2 with headquarters at Macon, the department said.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick of people looking at doctors as if they were God or something. I had an experience that I wish you would print. It would help put things in the proper perspective.

I had major surgery recently. A few days after the operation my doctor came by for a routine check. After chatting a few minutes he said he was sure he had lost his pencil in my bed. I said I didn't think it was possible, but he ignored me and began to tear the bed apart. After about 10 minutes of rummaging around he found the pencil in his pocket. Every bit of linen was off the bed by that time and the pillow case was turned inside out and thrown on the floor.

I mentioned this incident to a friend and was told the doctor was testing my reaction. I was not in a psychiatric hospital and I can't understand this sort of thing.

Please check with your medical consultants and find out what in the world the doctor was doing. Thank you - RITA

Dear Rita: My medical consultants believe the doctor should be tested for HIS reactions because he sounds a little off his rocker.

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago my two married sisters and I were complaining about our husbands' quirks. Mom told us a story that made a big impression on all of us. I'd like to pass it on.

Mom said the night her last child was married (she has been a widow for years) she went back to her apartment and suddenly the emptiness of the place hit her all at once. She said it was really silly because her last-to-marry was a son who wasn't home much anyway. But suddenly she realized he wouldn't be home at all. And that was the awful part.

She told my sisters and me to stop picking on our husbands, that most of the things wives complain about are not worth mentioning. From that day on I stopped nagging and our marriage has been a lot better ever since. - ONE WHO LEARNED IN TIME

Dear One: Thanks for your letter. And now let's hope others learn from you.

Dear Ann Landers: A few weeks ago a friend invited our daughter (age 2) to a birthday party. The birthday boy was 3.

It was made clear that parents were welcome and they would be served refreshments along with the children.

I asked if the adults would be served cocktails and was told "No. This party is for the children."

My husband overheard the conversation and said, "I am not going." He made it plain that he didn't care about the drink, but he thought the hostess was most ungracious. I agreed and told the hostess how we felt.

If adults want a cocktail the hostess should be happy to serve them one any time. In our home we wouldn't dream of doing it any other way. We would like your views on this. - MRS. S.L.L.

Dear Mrs. S.L.L.: I am with the hostess.

It's a sad state of affairs when someone who does not serve liquor is considered ungracious.

A mother who decides against serving cocktails to parents attending the birthday party of a child has good sense, in my opinion. I applaud her.

Mr. Charles Blanton, Editor
Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri 63801

Dear Charlie:

The article quoted below was written by Mrs. J. P. Strickland, wife of the assistant principal of a Reno, Nevada public school. This is the way so many American housewives feel today, that I thought maybe the women here in the Bootheel might enjoy this "sad, but true" situation.

"I AM A TIRED HOUSEWIFE"

I am tired of trying, in this land of abundant food, to balance my budget when milk prices jump three cents on the half - gallon, and meat which was 69 cents per pound goes up to 89 cents in just one week's time.

I am tired of staying home while my husband burns the midnight oil studying, so that he can make the next pay step-up -- only to find these added earnings gobbled up by increased taxes and rising living costs.

I am tired of "experts" calling conscientious mothers neurotic for insisting that their offspring toe the line.

I'm tired of attorneys and social workers and courts who continue to hand down candy-coated sentences because, they claim, the poor dear hoodlum wasn't brought up in the right environment -- an environment that half the world would be envious to share.

I'm tired of hearing of all the "isms" which are supposed to take the place of the ideals and ideas propounded by our God - fearing forefathers, who died that we might be free. I'm tired of having these liberties taken away from my children step - by - step in the name of social benefits.

I'm tired of being told that it's sissy or old hat to believe in God's way -- and that God is dead.

I'm tired of seeing our police officers ridiculed and criminals exalted during riots and "marches".

I am tired of begging people to help me in the home -- then having them turn me down because they might miss an unemployment check.

I'm tired of having to run to turn off my radio when smutty jokes come over the air, often under the guise of folk songs.

I'm also tired of having to censor my current magazines before letting my youngsters read them.

I'm tired of improving my property by painting and adding new fixtures, only to have my taxes doubled because of those improvements.

I'm tired of seeing the hurt look in the eyes of my children when they wear half-soled shoes to school while playmates whose parents are "on the dole" get shiny new shoes to flaunt.

I'm tired of seeing people who have saved diligently being penalized for their thrift while the ne'er - do - well is coddled with unearned benefits.

Yes, I'm sick and tired of seeing people with initiative and good old Yankee ingenuity pushed around while loafers are being paid to be slothful. I'm sick of this modern psychology which is so different from the Golden Rule and the Book of Proverbs.

I am tired of seeing this once wonderful God - fearing nation bowing to Satan's whims -- but I am not too tired to pray.

By Mrs. J. P. Strickland

Needless to say, I am in complete agreement with Mrs. Strickland.

Sincerely yours,
Doris I. Livingston

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE OUTSWINDLED HORSE PLAYER

Benny met a fraud in need who was no friend in deed. He told Benny that a horse race had been fixed and that if Benny would give him $100, he would bet the money for Benny on the fixed horse. As it turned out, however, the only fix there was, was the one in which Benny's fraudulent friend had been in before running into Benny. With the money safely in his pocket, he quickly became one of the Vanishing Americans never to be seen again.

Upon discovering that he had been taken, Benny deducted the $100 from his income taxes as a loss resulting from a theft as allowed by the Internal Revenue Code.

"I was parted from my money," he told a tax agent, "as deftly as if some crook had picked my pocket."

"Serves you right," was the agent's answer. "You were ready to become a party to a scheme to defraud others by taking advantage of a fixed race. Because it back-fired gives you no right to make the deduction."

With the deduction disallowed, Benny took the matter to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Benny to deduct his loss?

This is how the judge ruled: Benny won! The judge held that Benny never became a party to a scheme to defraud others since no scheme ever existed. It was only a pretense on the part of the thief to deprive Benny of his money.

TODAYS LEGAL POINTER:

Your mere presence at the perpetration of a crime, and nothing more, is not a crime. However, being arrested under such circumstances can be very touchy. You can save yourself a lot of aggravation, generally by letting your lawyer handle the situation right from the start before it becomes overly involved with explanations and complications.

(For personal guidance, see your local attorney)

Chaffee to Vote On Annexation

CHAFFEE -- The voters of Chaffee will go to the polls March 28 to decide the fate of the proposed annexation by the city of property owned by R. H. Capshaw.

Capshaw is a candidate for mayor and wishes the property annexed so that he can meet residency requirements.

The election had been slated for March 22 but was changed because the circuit court had not ruled on the issue.

WORD USAGE

In England, et as the past tense of eat has the highest prestige, the Catholic Digest states, and the best-spoken Englishmen will say, "He et his dinner."

If you're not using Zip Code—
you're not getting your nickel's worth

When you plunk down a nickel for a stamp, you should get the world's most efficient postal service in return.

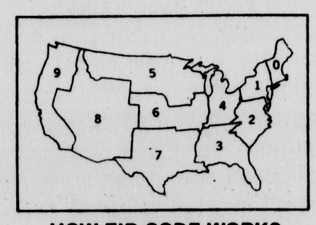

But—if you haven't added the Zip Code to the mailing address, you may not get all you are paying for.

Because Zip Code makes it possible for postal workers to sort mail faster and deliver by more direct routes. With Zip, they will use new electronic machines that "read" Zip numbers and sort mail fifteen times faster than was possible before!

That is why Zip Code is now the most important part of any mailing address. Always use it on every letter you write.

Include your own Zip in your return address, too. That makes it easy for others to Zip their mail to you. When you don't know a Zip Code, simply call your post office or look it up in their Zip Code Directory. Local Zip Codes can be found on the Zip Map in the business pages of your phone book.

It is so easy to use Zip Code. And when you do—you know you are getting your nickel's worth!

HOW ZIP CODE WORKS

Suppose the Zip Code is 60635. The "6" says it goes to the Midwest. The "06" narrows it down to Chicago. The last two digits—"35"—pinpoint the local post office. This eliminates many handling procedures. The letter is sorted faster, and sent more directly to its destination.

Today is Tuesday, March 28, the 87th day of 1967. There are 278 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1834, the Senate resolved that President Andrew Jackson had exceeded his authority when he removed public deposits from the United States Bank and deposited them in state banks.

On this date:

In 1868, Russian author Maxim Gorki was born.

In 1910, Theodore Roosevelt lectured in Egypt and the University of Cairo.

In 1943, famed pianist and composer Sergei Rachmaninoff died.

Ten years ago — The British released from exile the Greek-Cypriot leader, Archbishop Makarios, after he made a personal plea for an end to violence on Cyprus where Terrorists were trying to force the union of the British colony with Greece.

One year ago -- The FBI arrested 13 persons in Mississippi in connection with the firebomb slaying of a Negro civil rights leader.

fired, under the CAP regulations, but he was kept on the job and actively campaigned to get Williams fired, by telling the board members "he just thought Williams should go, but he didn't want the job and wouldn't have it, if it was offered to him." But his was one of the first applications filed, after Williams was discharged. It is known that Williams desired a certain vacant building at Portageville for his home office, and caused the purchase of the building by a Portageville citizen with an agreement to rent it, only to be confronted by Mr. Thomason, at Poplar Bluff, Mo. (at the 1966 Missouri Cotton Producer's Ass'n. meeting.) with the suggestion that he should rent another vacant room, owned by an associate and aide of Mr. Thomasons, in campaigning for Hilary Bush for Governor in 1964, and Mr. Williams back-tracked on his agreement to rent the other building and proposed a lease of the one Mr. Thomason suggested. The terms of the lease exceeded the authority of DAEOC under CAP regulations, the record of the minutes will show it was never approved by a majority of the board, or by a majority when a quorum was present, and there is no approval, in writing, on record from Mr. Thomason. Some $7,000.00 to $9,000.00 was spent on the renovation of the old room by DAEOC, which can never get its money back, even if it stays the full five years of the lease; $100.00 a month is paid to lessor, in addition to the cost of improvements.

The other assistant to Mr. Williams, it is believed, was a conspirator with the one mentioned above, to attain the dismissal of Williams. At least, it is known that he campaigned with the Negro members of the board for the election of the other assistant as Administrative Director. It is also known that in at least one instance he forced a local co-ordinator of a CAA (NSC) to keep an aide who wouldn't do a bit of work. He had come to Missouri, as a school teacher, from Arkansas, and, although claiming Portageville, Missouri, as his residence for several years, had never thought to get a Missouri license for his automobile - so he was recently picked up and fined in the New Madrid County Magistrate Court.

The original board of DAEOC consisted of some very fine citizens who resigned in disgust, when they could not learn what was going on, or what they were supposed to do. Other good people have been on subsequent boards and have given up for the same reason.

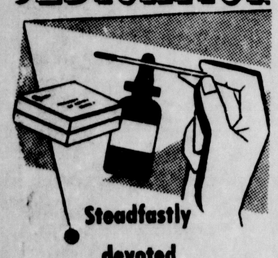

Now, it appears that there is a new board which intends to stop the foolishness and be ready to see that the Poverty Program in the Bootheel is correctly operated, on all fronts, if congress votes to continue the program. They have made a good start, perhaps there are other dead heads on the payroll who need to go, in order to get every possible dollar down to the needy people on the poverty level. One of the assistants who was discharged, has continued to give out press releases saying the program has assisted some 130,000 needy people in the Bootheel. Did you ever check the Blue Book? The last census shows that only 196,000 people in the whole of the six counties, and everyone should know each of the counties has lost population since 1960, unless it might be Scott County. Incidentally the Federal Department of Labor has done a fine job with its Manpower Development Program in Sikeston; in contrast to the mess-up of the Poverty Program.

The latest report is that the two assistants fired by the new DAEOC board are appealing their dismissals. There is no provision for such appeals under the Missouri law, which leaves such matters entirely at the discretion of the board members - no matter what Kansas City may say or guidelines may contain. Perhaps it is time, if necessary, to get Mr. Thomason before a Federal Court, over some of his rulings.

It is hoped that the new board will stand its ground and continue to do what it thinks best for a successful operation of the Poverty Program in the Bootheel, without giving in to coercion from any source.

Fortune does not change men; it unmasks them.

says its "real work" was done by the general counsel, J. Lee Rankin, and the 14 assistant counsels. As for the members of the commission, Manchester writes," the lustrous names of the seven appointees were for public consumption."

Manchester also is critical of actions of Secret Service agents before the assassination and immediately after the first shot struck Kennedy.

He makes these points:

1. On the night before the tragedy, "nine agents of the White House detail were out on the town. They started with beer and mixed drinks at the Fort Worth Press Club."

2. "At various times, they were joined by three agents of the 12-to-8 shift — who were officially on duty, assigned to guard the President's bedroom door."

3. A jet airplane pilot is grounded if he fails tests that measure his reflexes. "However, presidential bodyguards were not required to take" these tests.

4. When the first shot was fired, "most of the hunters in the motorcade identified the sound immediately as rifle fire, but the White House detail was confused."

5. Two agents were in the front seat of the presidential car. "They were in a position to take evasive action after the first shot, but for five terrible seconds, they were immobilized."

Manchester summarizes his indictment in the words, "The central fact was that the Secret Service had failed."

A publishers' note on the title page says, "Harper & Row wishes to make it clear that neither Mrs. John F. Kennedy nor Sen. Robert F. Kennedy has in any way approved or endorsed the material appearing in this book."

This reflects a bitter controversy which ranged for months between Manchester and the Kennedys. Last December, Mrs. Kennedy called the manuscript "tasteless and distorted" and brought suit to block publication. She demanded revisions and deletions. Three former aides to the senator said, after reading the manuscript, "We were talking about 144 changes."

Manchester replied that the reasons for demanding changes were "political" and constituted "an attempt to suppress vital facts."

Their acrimonious exchanges, erupting over a period of several months, received front-page reporting in newspapers from coast to coast. This, coupled with Look magazine's four-part serialization of the book, gave Manchester's story an unprecedented degree of advance publicity.

Perhaps as a result, booksellers report a large volume of advance orders.

Harper & Row said the first printing runs to 600,000 copies. There are indications that a second printing will appear almost immediately.

Six per cent of the net receipts on the first 100,000 sales will be retained by the publishers, they said.

An undisclosed part of the earnings accruing to both Manchester and the publisher has been earmarked for the Kennedy Library.

Literary agents estimate the book may earn around $3 million.

Manchester believes -- but states as fact—that Oswald went insane on Nov. 21, 1963, the night before Kennedy was assassinated. The author says Oswald's reason crumbled as the result of a quarrel with his Russian wife, Marina, from whom he was semiestranged.

She had been living in Irving, a suburb of Dallas, in the home of Ruth Paine, a friend. Oswald lived in a Dallas rooming house. He visited his wife and children on weekends.

Manchester wrote that on the night of Nov. 21, Oswald appeared to be watching television in Mrs. Paine's home. "In fact," the author says, "he was going mad."

Oswald appeared sane, however, to the police and other investigative officers who interviewed him after the assassination. The transcript of these interviews, published in the Warren Commission report, shows that Oswald told the same story to each of them. He answered certain questions but said he would not answer others until he could have an attorney with him. And he specified the attorney, "A New York lawyer whom he did not know" but who had defended some persons accused "of a conspiracy against the government."

Manchester says in his foreward he "felt entitled to record my opinions" and was "forming judgments."

But he does not pinpoint the passages in his book where fact leaves off and "opinion" or "judgment" begins.

He says that Mrs. Kennedy, contrary to McNamara and other federal officials, "hoped" a conspiracy had taken her husband's life. The book says, "for then there would be an air of inevitability about the tragedy; then she could persuade herself that if the plotters had missed on Elm Street they would have eventually succeeded elsewhere."

Manchester does not say whether Mrs. Kennedy told him this. He does not tell the reader whether it is fact or his judgment.

He said the talks might take any one of four forms:

—Direct talks among the United States, North Vietnam, members of the control commission and the two cochairmen.

Thant stressed that these discussions would be aimed at reconvening the Geneva conference, and would deal solely with such matters as the time, place, agenda and who would take part.

Asked specifically whether he considered Monday's North Vietnamese statement as a rejection of his proposals, he said he did not wish to interpret or assess any of the replies. A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Hanoi had expressed doubts about Thant's peace plan.

River Floods Madrid Farms

NEW MADRID - "Of course farming Mississippi river bottom land is a great risk. If you had $10,000 to $15,000 in a crop that you could lose in a few days, you'd be scared but you wouldn't give up." It was William B. Henry a former farmer in the Mississippi river bottoms, speaking.

The river has taken a rise from 12 feet March 7 to 31.7 feet Sunday. It is expected to fall this week, Simon Tanner, plan engineer of the Municipal Light and Power Co., said.

To the farmers involved, flood is a problem to cope with each year. To many farmers the flooding benefits farming by leaving a settlement on top of the land which fertilizes it.

Others may be delayed in planting their crops, which causes a crop loss.

The river's back water now covers about 10,000 acres of good farm land, but even under these circumstances a major crop loss has not been experienced since the flooding in 1937.

River bottom land is valued with the best. The present value of most of it is $500-600 per acre.

Flooding now is caused by high water coming out of the Ohio river about 60 miles north of here, Tanner explained.

THE POVERTY PROGRAM IN SOUTHEAST MISSOURI THE OTHER SIDE OF THE COIN

For several months it has seemed that Don Thomason's little group of followers have controlled the Poverty Program in the Bootheel, and have had access to a portion of the press which has gained the most publicity; without an attempt being made to ascertain the truth. The hard core of Thomason followers have seemed to think they alone own the Poverty Program and have taken offense at any attempt to bring to light the many irregularities and mistakes that were being committed - the Kansas City office participated by white-washing and covering up all the mistakes this group made, and placed all the blame on the first elected Administrative Director, Mr. Earl Williams, of Charleston, Missouri, who was following the instructions given to him by Mr. Thomason, or his Kansas City employees - over the telephone, or face to face conversation - seldom in writing, where it would be a matter of record. But now an audit has been filed by one of Mr. Thomason's Regional employees (an auditor from Boston, Mass., sent out to eleven midwestern states) and this audit which was hurriedly presented to the D.A.E.O.C. Board by a representative from Kansas City, last January, but refused to leave a copy with the members of the board, although clearly disclosing the author's hesitancy in criticising anything Kansas City wished covered up, also shows why the opposition to the ruling clique wished to clean house.

The Poverty Program started very quietly in the Bootheel, only a very small portion of the public ever heard of such a movement, and no attempt was made by the ruling group to alert the public at large.

To give some idea of how the thing developed, a contact from Kansas City was sent to New Madrid County, and that county proposed going along, if the program would grant it $5,000.00 to hire one Director, and the County Court would stand the expense of all other necessary employees, etc. At that time a County Superintendent of Schools, who was voted out, by doing away with his office under a recent law, was available and agreed to take on the job for the $5,000.00 per year salary. The man from Thomason's office said they couldn't allow that much, so the County said "forget it" and lost all interest in the program. Then they started bringing in employees from the East and paying some up to $12,000.00.

Now the auditor says there was over $311,000.00, improperly spent, which included double pay for some employees, pay for services never rendered, the purchase of unauthorized equipment, and a host of irregularities. The administrative officials still with DAEOC continue to say all the audit shows is bad bookkeeping - the blame for all of which rests on the shoulders of Earl Williams alone. Hogwash; is the public gullible enough to believe that? With such bad bookkeeping, it is a wonder the auditor came up with as much as he did. Are there more bugs under the rug?

Much has been written about other citizens getting interested in the Poverty Program to use it for political purposes. But it seems that the only person interested in using the program for political purposes is Don Thomason, who, it is reported, wishes to run for a state office. Some say for congress to replace Paul Jones. The truth is that somebody smelled a rat in the wood-pile, and set out to determine if they could discover what was wrong, but they couldn't learn much from the home office of DAEOC, at Portageville, or from the auditor (who later filed his report under date of Dec. 31, 1966) who proclaimed to know nothing. Members of the DAEOC Board, under the law, were entitled to have all the information available. The auditor's report was made to Kansas City only.

Now a new board of directors has been elected, a new Chairman selected, and the process of cleaning house begun. But the old crowd still gets the ear of some of the press, which, it is believed will change its tune, when the full contents of the audit is made available to it. Why doesn't this element of the press insist that Kansas City release the full contents of the audit to the public?

For instance, an assistant director had helped wage a campaign to undermine his superior, Earl Williams, and gone so far as to call Mr. Williams a liar in front of all his staff employees. The official audit shows that this assistant had helped to set up a program at Hayti involving some sort of youth project and had purchased a used bus for transportation through the Chairman of the DAEOC (the audit says for $650.00, but does not mention names, or whether the school board which owned the bus had ever approved the sale) and that over $1,000.00 had been paid to an automobile dealer, then a member of the DAEOC board, for parts, labor, and repairs on the bus - all of which was done direct and by-passed the home office of DAEOC, without its approval, or approval from Kansas City. When Mr. Williams complained of such actions, he aroused the fury of the original clique (although all this was against OEO regulations). The assistant director ended up with $1,050.00 extra pay, to which he was not entitled and should have been

Alfred Patton Arrested, Posts Bond

NEW MADRID -- Alfred Patton, 37, was arrested Monday afternoon by Sheriff W. L. "Cowboy" Ramsey and charged with possession of stolen property.

Sunday morning the sheriff searched Patton's farm five miles west of Marston and recovered farm implement parts believed to have been stolen from Guy DeLisle of Portageville.

Patton, who had been out on $5,000 bond on charges of possession and selling stolen property, again posted $5,000 bond Monday. He denies any knowledge of the items found on his farm.

He is scheduled to appear before Judge Erie Wright in magistrate court Thursday morning for a preliminary hearing.

Ohioan Apparent Victim of Truck

A body of a man identified as Gordon Zahner, 30, Delaware, Ohio, was found early today near the water's edge of the Mississippi river on the Missouri side of highway 60. He was apparently knocked from the river bridge by a truck.

The man was found by a rescue squad from Missouri and Illinois.

The highway patrol reported that Zahner was driving a 1964 Rambler at 10:30 p.m. Monday east and when rounding a curse, ran off the road into a field. The car was found there.

A man was reported seen staggering across the bridge around 2 a.m. today. No one was found when officers investigated.

The patrol expressed belief Zahner had been struck by a passing truck. He apparently was thrown from the bridge when struck by a truck. A broken truck mirror was found on the bridge nearby.

Coroner Elgin McMikle reported his investigation showed that Zahner was injured when his vehicle left the highway but the major injuries occurred when he was struck by a passing truck's mirror and was thrown over the bridge railing. Zahner suffered a skull fracture and broken bones. Death is believed to have been instantaneous. There was no inquest.

Cabbie Tells Of Robbery

A Cape Girardeau man charged with the armed robbery of cab driver in Scott City March 10, was bound over to appear April 13, in circuit court in Benton today after a preliminary hearing in magistrate court.

Ivory Betts, 27, Cape Girardeau, is charged with taking about $20 from Trentis E. Jordon, Cape Girardeau cab driver. Judge M. E. Montgomery presided. Prosecuting attorney Fielding Potashnick represented the state.

Jordon testified that Betts contacted him in Cape Girardeau and asked to be driven to Scott City. When they reached Scott City, Betts directed him to an alley where he (Betts) struck Jordon in the mouth with his fist. He held a knife against Jordon's back and asked for his money, Jordon testified. Jordon said he did not see the knife.

Scott county authorities were notified and deputy Jack Stewart drove to Scott City to investigate. Jordon took Stewart to the alley where the alleged robbery took place and described Betts.

Jordon and deputy Stewart saw Betts near a service station in Scott City and Betts was placed under arrest, Jordon said.

Deputy Stewart testified to the events recounted by Jordon.

The deputy also showed the court a pocket knife found in Betts' possession the night of the arrest, and said he found $19.53 on his person.

Manchester Book Reveals Worldwide Military Alert

NEW YORK (AP) — Fears of an international plot to overthrow the U.S. government prompted Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to alert every American military base around the world the minute he heard that President John F. Kennedy had been shot in Dallas, Tex., William Manchester says.

"By every readable signal the situation was very red," Manchester writes in his book, "The Death of a President."

The much-disputed book contains 350,000 words of text, plus diagrams, appendices and a list of sources. The price is $10.

McNamara "kept his head and made all the right moves" even before he learned that Kennedy was dead, Manchester says. The worldwide warning told American military commanders, "this is the time to be especially alert."

President Johnson is quoted in the book as saying "there might be war" if Americans became aroused by suspicions that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro had conspired to kill Kennedy.

It was the "wild rumors" about a conspiracy that brought the Warren Commission into existence, Manchester says. The commission, after a long investigation, concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald -- and Oswald alone -- assassinated Kennedy.

Johnson had difficulty persuading Chief Justice Earl Warren to head the inquiry, Manchester says, because Warren opposed "extracurricular activity" by Supreme Court justices.

Manchester quotes Warren as saying: "The President told me how serious the situation was. He said there had been wild rumors and there was the international situation to think of. He said he had just talked to Dean Rusk, (secretary of state) who was concerned. He said that if the public became aroused against Castro and Khrushchev there might be war."

Manchester agrees with the commission's finding. But he

THE POVERTY PROGRAM IN SOUTHEAST MISSOURI THE OTHER SIDE OF THE COIN

For several months it has seemed that Don Thomason's little group of followers have controlled the Poverty Program in the Bootheel, and have had access to a portion of the press which has gained the most publicity; without an attempt being made to ascertain the truth. The hard core of Thomason followers have seemed to think they alone own the Poverty Program and have taken offense at any attempt to bring to light the many irregularities and mistakes that were being committed - the Kansas City office participated by white-washing and covering up all the mistakes this group made, and placed all the blame on the first elected Administrative Director, Mr. Earl Williams, of Charleston, Missouri, who was following the instructions given to him by Mr. Thomason, or his Kansas City employees - over the telephone, or face to face conversation - seldom in writing, where it would be a matter of record. But now an audit has been filed by one of Mr. Thomason's Regional employees (an auditor from Boston, Mass., sent out to eleven midwestern states) and this audit which was hurriedly presented to the D.A.E.O.C. Board by a representative from Kansas City, last January, but refused to leave a copy with the members of the board, although clearly disclosing the author's hesitancy in criticising anything Kansas City wished covered up, also shows why the opposition to the ruling clique wished to clean house.

The Poverty Program started very quietly in the Bootheel, only a very small portion of the public ever heard of such a movement, and no attempt was made by the ruling group to alert the public at large.

To give some idea of how the thing developed, a contact from Kansas City was sent to New Madrid County, and that county proposed going along, if the program would grant it $5,000.00 to hire one Director, and the County Court would stand the expense of all other necessary employees, etc. At that time a County Superintendent of Schools, who was voted out, by doing away with his office under a recent law, was available and agreed to take on the job for the $5,000.00 per year salary. The man from Thomason's office said they couldn't allow that much, so the County said "forget it" and lost all interest in the program. Then they started bringing in employees from the East and paying some up to $12,000.00.

Now the auditor says there was over $311,000.00, improperly spent, which included double pay for some employees, pay for services never rendered, the purchase of unauthorized equipment, and a host of irregularities. The administrative officials still with DAEOC continue to say all the audit shows is bad bookkeeping - the blame for all of which rests on the shoulders of Earl Williams alone. Hogwash; is the public gullible enough to believe that? With such bad bookkeeping, it is a wonder the auditor came up with as much as he did. Are there more bugs under the rug?

Much has been written about other citizens getting interested in the Poverty Program to use it for political purposes. But it seems that the only person interested in using the program for political purposes is Don Thomason, who, it is reported, wishes to run for a state office. Some say for congress to replace Paul Jones. The truth is that somebody smelled a rat in the wood-pile, and set out to determine if they could discover what was wrong, but they couldn't learn much from the home office of DAEOC, at Portageville, or from the auditor (who later filed his report under date of Dec. 31, 1966) who proclaimed to know nothing. Members of the DAEOC Board, under the law, were entitled to have all the information available. The auditor's report was made to Kansas City only.

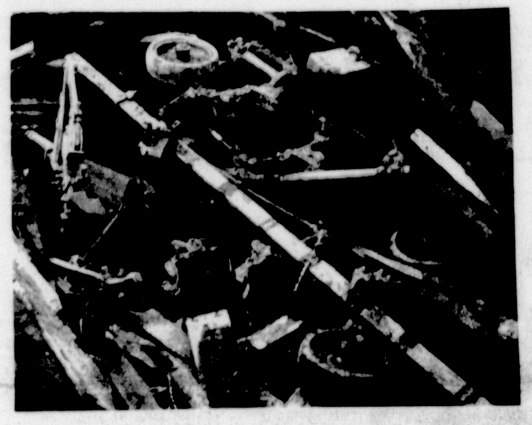

Now a new board of directors has been elected, a new Chairman selected, and the process of cleaning house begun. But the old crowd still gets the ear of some of the press, which, it is believed will change its tune, when the full contents of the audit is made available to it. Why doesn't this element of the press insist that Kansas City release the full contents of the audit to the public?

For instance, an assistant director had helped wage a campaign to undermine his superior, Earl Williams, and gone so far as to call Mr. Williams a liar in front of all his staff employees. The official audit shows that this assistant had helped to set up a program at Hayti involving some sort of youth project and had purchased a used bus for transportation through the Chairman of the DAEOC (the audit says for $650.00, but does not mention names, or whether the school board which owned the bus had ever approved the sale) and that over $1,000.00 had been paid to an automobile dealer, then a member of the DAEOC board, for parts, labor, and repairs on the bus - all of which was done direct and by-passed the home office of DAEOC, without its approval, or approval from Kansas City. When Mr. Williams complained of such actions, he aroused the fury of the original clique (although all this was against OEO regulations). The assistant director ended up with $1,050.00 extra pay, to which he was not entitled and should have been

A body of a man identified as Gordon Zahner, 30, Delaware, Ohio, was found early today near the water's edge of the Mississippi river on the Missouri side of highway 60. He was apparently knocked from the river bridge by a truck.

The man was found by a rescue squad from Missouri and Illinois.

The highway patrol reported that Zahner was driving a 1964 Rambler at 10:30 p.m. Monday east and when rounding a curse, ran off the road into a field. The car was found there.

A man was reported seen staggering across the bridge around 2 a.m. today. No one was found when officers investigated.

The patrol expressed belief Zahner had been struck by a passing truck. He apparently was thrown from the bridge when struck by a truck. A broken truck mirror was found on the bridge nearby.

Coroner Elgin McMikle reported his investigation showed that Zahner was injured when his vehicle left the highway but the major injuries occurred when he was struck by a passing truck's mirror and was thrown over the bridge railing. Zahner suffered a skull fracture and broken bones. Death is believed to have been instantaneous. There was no inquest.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The decision by the North Vietnamese to release a letter from President Ho Chi Minh rejecting flatly a direct peace offer by President Lyndon B. Johnson is the best support that the administration has received for its conduct of the war since Johnson took office.

The news accounts of the exchange - the President's conciliatory letter and the cold rebuff he got from Ho Chi Minh - has taken all the wind out of the sails of Sen. Robert Kennedy and Sen. William Fulbright, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, and other doves.

Ho played straight into Johnson's hands strange as that may seem. Surely he didn't intend to do it.

There is nothing that President Johnson could have done - and he has tried almost everything - which could have produced the propaganda result so completely and conclusively as did Ho's hard-nosed letter response to Johnson's peace overture.

The North Vietnamese leader spoke eloquently and loudly of his country's disinclination to accept any offer to negotiate short of abject surrender and complete American abandonment of South Vietnam.

Just about everyone in this country, whose opinions on the Vietnam war aren't prejudiced and rigidly held, now believes that President Johnson has been doing all that he reasonably could to begin negotiations with the North Vietnamese.

There is a great deal of evidence suggesting that the Johnson administration is setting out now to win the war in Vietnam as the only satisfactory way to conclude the struggle.

Ho Chi Minh has done more than any person to make this course appear to be justified in the eyes of the American people.

He should tell his people to prepare for the consequences.

Time is running out. The language that guns speak is the only kind that Ho understands. Our answer should be loud and clear.

"I AM A TIRED HOUSEWIFE"

(A year ago there was reprinted on this page an editorial entitled "I Am a Tired American," written by Alan C. McIntosh, editor of a weekly newspaper in Minnesota. Presented here this week is an article entitled "I Am a Tired Housewife," sent in by Mrs. J. P. Strickland, wife of the assistant principal of a public school in Reno, Nev. It reflects further some of the discontent over different aspects of American life today. - David Lawrence, Editor.)

By Mrs. J. P. Strickland

I am a tired housewife.

I am tired of trying, in this land of abundant food, to balance my budget when milk prices jump three cents on the half-gallon, and meat which was 69¢ per pound goes to 89¢ in just one week's time.

I am tired of staying home while my husband burns the midnight oil studying, so that he can make the next pay step-up - only to find these added earnings gobbled up by increased taxes and rising living costs.

I am tired of "experts" calling conscientious mothers neurotic for insisting that their offspring toe the line.

I'm tired of attorneys and social workers and courts who continue to hand down candy-coated sentences because, they claim, the poor dear hoodlum wasn't brought up in the right environment - an environment that half the world would be envious to share.

I'm tired of the cement deserts swallowing up lovely trees and making pensioners homeless - all in the name of bulldozer-type progress or code-rating accommodations.

I'm tired of hearing of all the "isms" which are supposed to take the place of the ideals and ideas propounded by our God-fearing forefathers, who died that we might be free. I'm tired of having these liberties taken away from my children step-by-step in the name of social benefits.

I'm tired of being told that it's sissy or old hat to believe in God's Way, and that God is dead.

I'm also tired of hearing that Christmas carols shouldn't be part of a school concert.

I'm tired of seeing our police officers ridiculed and criminals exalted during riots and "marches."

I am tired of begging people to help me in the home - then having them turn me down because they might miss an unemployment check.

I am tired of intermittent phone calls during the day and night by some quack who took offense at a letter penned to the local newspaper.

I get especially tired when my youngsters are wakened from naps by this or by advertising or soliciting over my private line.

I'm tired of being told that my work is easy because I have modern appliances in place of a real live maid and that my tiredness from sixteen or more hours of labor in my home is caused by my not having enough outside interests.

In fact, I'm tired of not having time to see perfection in my household tasks because the demands on my time to civic causes take up so many hours, yet accomplish little because of constant bickering over chairmanships or protocol.

I'm tired of texts which my children bring home from school telling how wonderful world government will be and how selfish the U.S.A. is, not to give away everything she has earned by the sweat of her brow.

I'm tired of answering begging calls or receiving piles of "gimmee" mail even after giving generously to the United Fund. My feet are sore from helping out at rummage sales and the like to raise money for things which my husband's tax money is supposed to cover.

I'm tired, tired, tired of the idea that sex education is a panacea for every ill under the sun.

I am sick and tired of the "better" women's magazines thinking they have to have an article on sex in each current issue.

I'm tired of having to run to turn off my radio when smutty jokes come over the air, often under the guise of folk songs.

I'm also tired of having to censor my current magazines before letting my youngsters read them.

I'm tired of improving my property by painting and adding new fixtures, only to have my taxes doubled because of those improvements.

I'm tired of seeing the hurt look in the eyes of my children when they wear half-soled shoes to school while playmates whose parents are "on the dole" get shiny new shoes to flaunt.

I'm tired of seeing people who have saved diligently being penalized for their thrift while the ne're-do-well is coddled with unearned benefits.

Yes, I'm sick and tired of seeing people with initiative and good old Yankee ingenuity pushed around while loafers are being paid to be slothful. I'm sick of this modern psychology which is so different from the Golden Rule and the Book of Proverbs.

I am tired of seeing this once wonderful God-fearing nation bowing to Satan's whims, but I am not too tired to pray.

BIG SLEEP IN THE HOUSE

State Representatives interested in good government more or less got caught with their "legislative pants down" when it came time to vote on House Bill No. 166 recently. The measure carried the lower chamber at Jefferson City by such a wide margin that there can only be a suspicion that many lawmakers did not read the provisions of the measure.

One of the catch phrases in the measure, designed to "supplement" a 1965 law, requires municipal bodies and other public agencies to engage in negotiations with any labor organization that represents employes. As passed by the House, this means that city council, boards of public works and many other public agencies will be forced, whether they wish to or not, to conduct negotiations with petitioning unions.

A great many Southeast Missourians feel that public agencies should not be forced to negotiate since these bodies represent the taxpayers and not private companies. The funds involved are public tax funds, not private profits as in the case of companies and corporations.

Still another joker in the proposed law is a requirement that issues "shall be resolved" by the State Board of Mediation, a union-dominated state agency.

Passage of House Bill 166 recalls the dismal days of an earlier session when the House and Senate passed Missouri's so-called "prevailing wage" law, which upset, postponed and increased the cost of untold public building projects throughout Southeast Missouri. It appears the House took the same big sleep that an earlier House took on the prevailing wage bill.

Sometimes it isn't a bad idea for lawmakers to read the provisions of pending legislation before they cast their vote.

THE MEANING OF ADVERTISING

It has been truthfully said that economic and political liberty live or die together. By the same token, a free press cannot exist without private enterprise and neither private enterprise nor personal liberty can exist without a free press. If statements such as these seem dogmatic, academic or trite, the pages of the nation's newspapers, periodicals and other publications tell a different story.

In columns of advertising, investor - owned enterprise, big and little, seeks the patronage of the public. A national news magazine recently carried a full - page advertisement over the signature of the president of a major investor - owned electric power system*. The purpose of the advertisement was to call attention to the opportunities for industrial development in its service area.

The power system in question is one of the most progressive in the country, but it is not alone in its drive to develop markets and expand its services to the benefit of the community. Thousands of taxpaying enterprises are pursuing the same course in every section of the United States. Their business - promoting efforts are reflected in the thousands of pages of advertiseing that we see every day in our hometown papers and magazines -- advertising that tells of new products, expanded service and new opportunities.

It is well worthwhile to think of these things when plans are put forth to extend government in business. Socialized industry does not need to advertise because free choice in the marketplace is gone. The customers are captives of a state monopoly. And in countries where socialism is total, the press consists of a few official organs.

There is a threat that the Maine lobster is on its way to extinction, one factor being that the average water temperature off Maine's coast has been dropping about half a degree a year, and the colder the water the slower the lobster grows and the longer it takes to reach legal size. It is estimated that this trend will continue for at least 20 years.

FALSE CLAIMS

During the past thirty years or more, the advocates of socialized electric power, in order to put through gigantic tax-exempt federal projects, have used the claim that some jobs were too big for private enterprise. At the same time, the investor-owned electric and gas industry pushed ahead in the face of formidable government competition and made a joke of the notion that private enterprise is not equal to the big jobs. The gas industry this year is celebrating its 150th anniversary. In recent years, it has established a record of spectacular growth. In fact, it is the sixth largest industry in the United States, and supplier of one third of all the energy consumed by the nation.

An investor-owned gas company publication reports that, "Today there are enough miles of (gas) transmission and distribution pipeline in the U.S. to reach from the earth to the moon three times, to serve 38 million customers in the U.S. and to provide more energy in one day than all the hydroelectric power projects in the U.S. produce in a week."

The gas industry, like all other industries developed with the savings and earnings of private citizens, has been a heavy taxpayer to all levels of government from the time the first gas lamp was lit. As a matter of fact, the biggest job in the world today, of private industry and its customers, is to provide tax revenues to the tune of hundreds of billions of dollars to government--which is done ungrudgingly. It is not true that government in business is clothed with unique virtues or ability -- nor that it must be called on to do the really big jobs.

FIGHTING WORDS

The Textile Workers Union of America recently asked that President Johnson issue an executive order banning the award of government contracts to an important supplier of vitally needed defnese materials. The reason? A long-standing controversy between the union and the company.

Happily, the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee in Washington, Democrat L. Mendel Rivers, is both a patriot and a fighter. The Congressional Record for June 20 carries some fighting words by the Congressman which jump off the page to remind us how precariously intertwined are battles being fought here at home and Vietnam.

"I would like," said Rep. Rivers, "to bring to the attention of the Congress what I consider the real story behind the current controversy between the National Labor Relations Board, the AFL-CIO and J. P. Stevens Co., one of the country's largest textile firms.

"By way of review let me say briefly that this controversy began in 1963 with a massive effort on the part of a group of unions . . . to organize the plants of Stevens.

"It is not my purpose to argue here today the merits of this controversy. Let me just say that in elections held in eight Stevens plants, employees have voted against the union in each and every one of these elections. In one of these plants . . .the NLRB ordered a rerun election . . . the employees went to the polls and voted the union down by a margin twice as large as before.

"This case has been argued in two U. S. district courts and the U. S. court of appeals as the union and the NLRB sought an injunction against the company. Each one of these courts refused to issue such an injunction. . .

"I say to you unequivocally, any individual or group that asks the Federal Government to withhold contracts for vitally needed war materials from a company simply because it has been found by the NLRB to be in violation of the Federal Labor law is acting irresponsibly and without any thought for the welfare of our Armed Forces.

"This is merely a desperate attempt by the AFL-CIO Council to gain, by fiat from our Government, bargaining authority which it has not been able to win in secret ballot elections."

Critical supplies and equipment for Vietnam are involved in this home-front fight. Congressman Rivers thinks that our soldiers take priority over labor bosses. We agree.

A CLASSIC CASE

Recently, a major nickel smelting company was ordered by a U. S. District Judge to reimburse the federal government to the tune of $624,000--including more than $87,000 in interest -- for past overcharges. Said the Judge. "This is a classic case of unjust enrichment. From the dates of overpayments, the company has had the use of the government's money."

Without questioning the wisdom or property of the decision, The Portland Oregonian observed: "An interesting point might be raised. Consider poor Joe Pungle, the wage earner and taxpayer. Each payday Joe's employer withholds some of his paycheck and hands it over to the government. At tax filing time Joe may find too much of his wages have been withheld, and he may apply for a refund. The government has had use of that overpayment for a considerable time at the best interest rates anyone can get -- none. Oregon's Joe Pungles have collected $41,111,954 in refunds in 1966. At a modest return, say six per cent, the interest would have been $2,466,717. How's that for a classic?"

NOW DIG THIS, DANIEL BOONE!

The new note in fashions is furs for men. Yes, FURS FOR MEN!

Cook - skin caps? Fur-lined mittens? A revival of the Joe College raccoon coat circa 1920s?

Don't be uncouth, PLEASE. The new masculine fur pieces are such sophisticated garments as a dinner jacket of black American broadtail at $450, a hip - length coat of red fox fur for $595, or a full-length dream in unplucked beaver for $799.

Or, for cuddly togetherness, his and hers minks for $6,000 the pair.

Sale of such coats is, the Fur Information and Fashion Council happily reports, brisk. Men like them because they are a status symbol and are, of course, warm -- and therefore practical.

So no unfurred bum should be too flip in cracking wise on the snazzy garments of the real hip fellows who wear them.

Nevertheless, the first guy who appears in public in a fur stole or neckpiece had better come out fighting!

BEYOND STUDENT SHENANIGANS

College students are traditionally entitled to engage in certain shenanigans, especially as spring approaches. But the "New Left," going beyond shenanigans, is out to seize control of the college system of the United States.

Spokesman for this self-styled New Left is the organization called Student for a Democratic Society. And the purpose of the SDC, according to its national vice president, is to "radically transform" the college community.

This gentleman has written: "What we don't want is a 'company union' student movement that sees itself as a body that helps a parental administration make better rules for us. What we do want is a union of students where the students themselves decide what kind of rules they want or don't want. Or whether they need rules at all."

When and if the New Left gains control, this spokesman goes on to say, it should push through a list of demands "in the form of a bill of rights" with a time limit for the college administration to reply. If the demands are met, the students should celebrate the victory. If they are not met, the students should "immediately begin mass demonstrations, sit - ins, boycott of all classes, and strikes of teaching assistants." One of the first demands, incidentally, would be an end of all grades for students.

Can this happen? Well, it has happened in many colleges and universities in South America, where communists takeover of the educational institutions has followed precisely this line. The communist conspirators always give first attention to capturing the minds of the young. H. L. H.

NEW YORK (AP) — "You have to make your own trip to the moon," said Ross Hunter. "There are no free rides."

Hunter is the youthful-looking former high school English teacher who now, as one of Hollywood's most successful producers, is becoming known as "the man with the box office touch."

Of the 36 films he has made since 1952 only two were financial duds, which he feels is something of a record.

"I have made a profit of $167 million for the studio," he remarked.

"Why? Because I don't make pictures for myself. I make them for the public. And what they want is to be entertained.

"Escape is a healthy word. And people are looking for a clean look in entertainment.

"European producers feel they have to give a slice of life. We feel that people get that slice of life in their own homes.

"We're on the upbeat now in Hollywood. European producers are on the downbeat. I feel that if you subject people to a neurotic film about despair, they go back to their homes and watch television, dull as that may be."

His next opus is "The Public Eye," which Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton will get a million dollars each to star in.

Ross used to be an actor himself. After a spell of teaching English in Cleveland, he put in a hitch in the Army, then took a film test and scored high.

He acted in 19 pictures —remember "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" and "Louisiana Hayride"? — and pushed his income up to $1,000 a week. His career was interrupted by an illness that sidelined him for a full year.

When he recovered nobody seemed to remember him. Unable to find work as an actor, Ross returned to teaching at $57.50 a week, spent his evenings studying producing.

"It was the best thing that could have happened to me," he recalled without bitterness. "I don't miss acting, and I don't think the public misses my acting either. I wouldn't be an actor again for anything in the world."

In a few years, as producer, Hunter climbed quickly back up the Hollywood ladder. His films include such hits as "Magnificent Obsession," "Imitation of Life," "Tammy, Tell Me True," "Flower Drum Song," and "Pillow Talk."

Among the stars he helped launch or bring to new peaks of popularity are Rock Hudson, Sandra Dee, Natalie Wood, Doris Day, Lana Turner, Hayley Mills, and Debbie Reynolds.

He is well aware that he's riding an unusual success wave, but says that if he should run into a series of flops he still has a resource available.

"I can always go back to teaching," he said cheerfully.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson, recently returned from South America, todays reports on his interview with the President of Chile.)

SANTIAGO -- President Eduardo Frei Mantalva of Chile is probably the most compulsive builder in Latin America, and when you ask him about his building his eyes sparkle and his hands gesture expressively.

Frei is building not merely houses but a nation. Today Chile is pushing, promoting, building more than at any other time in its history, and President Frei, with his Christian Democratic party, has been responsible, setting an example for all Latin America.

I talked to Frei in his office looking out over the Plaza De La Constitucion. Over his heavy mahogany desk hung a portrait of Bernardo O'Higgins, the George Washington of Chile. On the desk were a few working papers. Deep - set window sills led out to a balcony overlooking the square. And on a little telephone table was a miniature telephone keyboard identical with that of LBJ's.

President Frei has a lot in common with LBJ, as I discovered in talking with him. They are both ex - school teachers, both strong for education, both pushers for agriculture, land conservation and housing. Both, furthermore, are tall and thin.

"I was hoping to see President Johnson before April 15 when the summit conference opens," President Frei told me. "I know we would have had a lot in common. I hope to see him later in the year on a state visit."

"Tell me about your revolution without a firing squad," I asked, referring to Frei's sweeping social and economic reforms.

REVOLUTION WITHOUT FIRING

"Our chief accomplishment is education," President Frei replied, speaking English slowly and carefully. "The UNESCO in Paris cited us for having 96 per cent literacy, higher I think than any other country in the world.

"Revolution doesn't have to take the form of bloodshed and disorder. Building schools is the spirit of our revolution.

"In January and February," Frei continued, referring to the summer vacation in South America, "university students have gone south to build our schools. The government has furnished the window frames, the lumber, the locks, but the students have got the community started and they have done the rest.

"We have also increased students in our secondary schools by 40 per cent, and we have increased the basic term of education from six to eight years. Next year we will extend it to nine years.

"And we have served a million breakfasts in the public schools, together with 500,000 luncheons," said President Frei, "in part thanks to food from the United States."

The President of Chile went on to talk about the next goal of the Christian - Democratic Revolution --housing.

"Here we have not done as well as we should," he said frankly. "We plan to build 60,000 houses every year, but the cost of education may be too great. The past administration built 20,000 houses a year, and we have built, between 1964 - 1966, 45,000 houses each year. Probably we will build 55,000 this year. I am not sure. We hope to do better.

"Along with this housing program we have brought in water, lighting, built communal buildings which have laundries and libraries, and we have installed playgrounds and marketing facilities. Housing projects never had these before.

"The third goal of our revolution is health. We have organized 900 mobile health centers; we have trained nurses; and we have given, in 1966, 190 million liters of milk to mothers. In the last administration there was given only 88 million liters of milk. We have pledged 240 million for 1967. CHILE'S TOUGHEST PROBLEM

"The fourth point in our program is agrarian reform," said the President, "and this is why I could not come to the United States. That was the punishment given to me, that I could not see President Johnson -- all because of land reform."

President Frei referred to the fact that his bitterest opposition comes from the landed aristocracy in the so-called Chilean "establishment". Frei is the first President of Chile in history to take on the establishment. In neighboring Peru, where a dozen or so families own 80 per cent of the land, there has been only a small start toward land reform; but, in Chile, President Frei is in dead earnest.

"The land reform bill just passed the senate yesterday. Maybe I'll have to veto one part of it, but it will go into effect soon.

"We have another problem in connection with the land," he said, "erosion. Frankly, erosion is a greater calamity than earthquakes. This is because Chile is long and narrow, and the rivers rush down from the mountains directly into the sea. This rush of water through the centuries has been wearing our land away.

"So we have been planting trees. The last administration planted 25 million trees a year, but two days after I took office we started a program of 125 million trees the first year and 200 million the next year.

"I told the army, 'you must help,' and the army was enthusiastic. So were the students and the local communities. 'we will give you the trees,' I said. 'You can plant them'."

"Lady Bird would be pleased," I remarked.

"Someday I hope she can come to Chile and see what we are doing." So spoke the dynamic President of Chile regarding his "revolution without a firing squad."

More on President Frei's goals and problems will follow shortly.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The decision by the North Vietnamese to release a letter from President Ho Chi Minh rejecting flatly a direct peace offer by President Lyndon B. Johnson is the best support that the administration has received for its conduct of the war since Johnson took office.

The news accounts of the exchange - the President's conciliatory letter and the cold rebuff he got from Ho Chi Minh - has taken all the wind out of the sails of Sen. Robert Kennedy and Sen. William Fulbright, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, and other doves.

Ho played straight into Johnson's hands strange as that may seem. Surely he didn't intend to do it.

There is nothing that President Johnson could have done - and he has tried almost everything - which could have produced the propaganda result so completely and conclusively as did Ho's hard-nosed letter response to Johnson's peace overture.

The North Vietnamese leader spoke eloquently and loudly of his country's disinclination to accept any offer to negotiate short of abject surrender and complete American abandonment of South Vietnam.

Just about everyone in this country, whose opinions on the Vietnam war aren't prejudiced and rigidly held, now believes that President Johnson has been doing all that he reasonably could to begin negotiations with the North Vietnamese.

There is a great deal of evidence suggesting that the Johnson administration is setting out now to win the war in Vietnam as the only satisfactory way to conclude the struggle.

Ho Chi Minh has done more than any person to make this course appear to be justified in the eyes of the American people.

He should tell his people to prepare for the consequences.

Time is running out. The language that guns speak is the only kind that Ho understands. Our answer should be loud and clear.

I am a tired housewife.

I am tired of trying, in this land of abundant food, to balance my budget when milk prices jump three cents on the half-gallon, and meat which was 69¢ per pound goes to 89¢ in just one week's time.

I am tired of staying home while my husband burns the midnight oil studying, so that he can make the next pay step-up - only to find these added earnings gobbled up by increased taxes and rising living costs.

I'm tired of seeing our police officers ridiculed and criminals exalted during riots and "marches."

I am tired of begging people to help me in the home - then having them turn me down because they might miss an unemployment check.

I am tired of intermittent phone calls during the day and night by some quack who took offense at a letter penned to the local newspaper.

I get especially tired when my youngsters are wakened from naps by this or by advertising or soliciting over my private line.

I'm tired of being told that my work is easy because I have modern appliances in place of a real live maid and that my tiredness from sixteen or more hours of labor in my home is caused by my not having enough outside interests.

In fact, I'm tired of not having time to see perfection in my household tasks because the demands on my time to civic causes take up so many hours, yet accomplish little because of constant bickering over chairmanships or protocol.

I'm tired of texts which my children bring home from school telling how wonderful world government will be and how selfish the U.S.A. is, not to give away everything she has earned by the sweat of her brow.

I'm tired of answering begging calls or receiving piles of "gimmee" mail even after giving generously to the United Fund. My feet are sore from helping out at rummage sales and the like to raise money for things which my husband's tax money is supposed to cover.

I'm tired, tired, tired of the idea that sex education is a panacea for every ill under the sun.

I'm tired of having to run to turn off my radio when smutty jokes come over the air, often under the guise of folk songs.

I'm also tired of having to censor my current magazines before letting my youngsters read them.

Yes, I'm sick and tired of seeing people with initiative and good old Yankee ingenuity pushed around while loafers are being paid to be slothful. I'm sick of this modern psychology which is so different from the Golden Rule and the Book of Proverbs.

I am tired of seeing this once wonderful God-fearing nation bowing to Satan's whims, but I am not too tired to pray.

BIG SLEEP IN THE HOUSE

State Representatives interested in good government more or less got caught with their "legislative pants down" when it came time to vote on House Bill No. 166 recently. The measure carried the lower chamber at Jefferson City by such a wide margin that there can only be a suspicion that many lawmakers did not read the provisions of the measure.

One of the catch phrases in the measure, designed to "supplement" a 1965 law, requires municipal bodies and other public agencies to engage in negotiations with any labor organization that represents employes. As passed by the House, this means that city council, boards of public works and many other public agencies will be forced, whether they wish to or not, to conduct negotiations with petitioning unions.

A great many Southeast Missourians feel that public agencies should not be forced to negotiate since these bodies represent the taxpayers and not private companies. The funds involved are public tax funds, not private profits as in the case of companies and corporations.

Still another joker in the proposed law is a requirement that issues "shall be resolved" by the State Board of Mediation, a union-dominated state agency.

Passage of House Bill 166 recalls the dismal days of an earlier session when the House and Senate passed Missouri's so-called "prevailing wage" law, which upset, postponed and increased the cost of untold public building projects throughout Southeast Missouri. It appears the House took the same big sleep that an earlier House took on the prevailing wage bill.

Sometimes it isn't a bad idea for lawmakers to read the provisions of pending legislation before they cast their vote.

THE MEANING OF ADVERTISING

It has been truthfully said that economic and political liberty live or die together. By the same token, a free press cannot exist without private enterprise and neither private enterprise nor personal liberty can exist without a free press. If statements such as these seem dogmatic, academic or trite, the pages of the nation's newspapers, periodicals and other publications tell a different story.

In columns of advertising, investor - owned enterprise, big and little, seeks the patronage of the public. A national news magazine recently carried a full - page advertisement over the signature of the president of a major investor - owned electric power system*. The purpose of the advertisement was to call attention to the opportunities for industrial development in its service area.

The power system in question is one of the most progressive in the country, but it is not alone in its drive to develop markets and expand its services to the benefit of the community. Thousands of taxpaying enterprises are pursuing the same course in every section of the United States. Their business - promoting efforts are reflected in the thousands of pages of advertiseing that we see every day in our home-town papers and magazines -- advertising that tells of new products, expanded service and new opportunities.

It is well worthwhile to think of these things when plans are put forth to extend government in business. Socialized industry does not need to advertise because free choice in the marketplace is gone. The customers are captives of a state monopoly. And in countries where socialism is total, the press consists of a few official organs.

There is a threat that the Maine lobster is on its way to extinction, one factor being that the average water temperature off Maine's coast has been dropping about half a degree a year, and the colder the water the slower the lobster grows and the longer it takes to reach legal size. It is estimated that this trend will continue for at least 20 years.

FALSE CLAIMS

During the past thirty years or more, the advocates of socialized electric power, in order to put through gigantic tax-exempt federal projects, have used the claim that some jobs were too big for private enterprise. At the same time, the investor-owned electric and gas industry pushed ahead in the face of formidable government competition and made a joke of the notion that private enterprise is not equal to the big jobs. The gas industry this year is celebrating its 150th anniversary. In recent years, it has established a record of spectacular growth. In fact, it is the sixth largest industry in the United States, and supplier of one third of all the energy consumed by the nation.

An investor-owned gas company publication reports that, "Today there are enough miles of (gas) transmission and distribution pipeline in the U.S. to reach from the earth to the moon three times, to serve 38 million customers in the U.S. and to provide more energy in one day than all the hydroelectric power projects in the U.S. produce in a week."

The gas industry, like all other industries developed with the savings and earnings of private citizens, has been a heavy taxpayer to all levels of government from the time the first gas lamp was lit. As a matter of fact, the biggest job in the world today, of private industry and its customers, is to provide tax revenues to the tune of hundreds of billions of dollars to government--which is done ungrudgingly. It is not true that government in business is clothed with unique virtues or ability -- nor that it must be called on to do the really big jobs.

WONDERFUL THOUGHTS

"Why no," she replied with just the hint of a twinkle in her eye. "To tell the truth, doctor, I rather enjoy them."

FIGHTING WORDS

The Textile Workers Union of America recently asked that President Johnson issue an executive order banning the award of government contracts to an important supplier of vitally needed defnese materials. The reason? A long-standing controversy between the union and the company.

Happily, the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee in Washington, Democrat L. Mendel Rivers, is both a patriot and a fighter. The Congressional Record for June 20 carries some fighting words by the Congressman which jump off the page to remind us how precariously intertwined are battles being fought here at home and Vietnam.

"I would like," said Rep. Rivers, "to bring to the attention of the Congress what I consider the real story behind the current controversy between the National Labor Relations Board, the AFL-CIO and J. P. Stevens Co., one of the country's largest textile firms.

"By way of review let me say briefly that this controversy began in 1963 with a massive effort on the part of a group of unions . . . to organize the plants of Stevens.

"It is not my purpose to argue here today the merits of this controversy. Let me just say that in elections held in eight Stevens plants, employees have voted against the union in each and every one of these elections. In one of these plants . . .the NLRB ordered a rerun election . . . the employees went to the polls and voted the union down by a margin twice as large as before.

"This case has been argued in two U. S. district courts and the U. S. court of appeals as the union and the NLRB sought an injunction against the company. Each one of these courts refused to issue such an injunction. . .

"I say to you unequivocally, any individual or group that asks the Federal Government to withhold contracts for vitally needed war materials from a company simply because it has been found by the NLRB to be in violation of the Federal Labor law is acting irresponsibly and without any thought for the welfare of our Armed Forces.

"This is merely a desperate attempt by the AFL-CIO Council to gain, by fiat from our Government, bargaining authority which it has not been able to win in secret ballot elections."

Critical supplies and equipment for Vietnam are involved in this home-front fight. Congressman Rivers thinks that our soldiers take priority over labor bosses. We agree.

A CLASSIC CASE

Recently, a major nickel smelting company was ordered by a U. S. District Judge to reimburse the federal government to the tune of $624,000--including more than $87,000 in interest -- for past overcharges. Said the Judge. "This is a classic case of unjust enrichment. From the dates of overpayments, the company has had the use of the government's money."

Without questioning the wisdom or property of the decision, The Portland Oregonian observed: "An interesting point might be raised. Consider poor Joe Pungle, the wage earner and taxpayer. Each payday Joe's employer withholds some of his paycheck and hands it over to the government. At tax filing time Joe may find too much of his wages have been withheld, and he may apply for a refund. The government has had use of that overpayment for a considerable time at the best interest rates anyone can get -- none. Oregon's Joe Pungles have collected $41,111,954 in refunds in 1966. At a modest return, say six per cent, the interest would have been $2,466,717. How's that for a classic?"

NOW DIG THIS, DANIEL BOONE!

The new note in fashions is furs for men. Yes, FURS FOR MEN!

Cook - skin caps? Fur-lined mittens? A revival of the Joe College raccoon coat circa 1920s?

Don't be uncouth, PLEASE. The new masculine fur pieces are such sophisticated garments as a dinner jacket of black American broadtail at $450, a hip - length coat of red fox fur for $595, or a full-length dream in unplucked beaver for $799.

Or, for cuddly togetherness, his and hers minks for $6,000 the pair.

Sale of such coats is, the Fur Information and Fashion Council happily reports, brisk. Men like them because they are a status symbol and are, of course, warm -- and therefore practical.

So no unfurred bum should be too flip in cracking wise on the snazzy garments of the real hip fellows who wear them.

BEYOND STUDENT SHENANIGANS

College students are traditionally entitled to engage in certain shenanigans, especially as spring approaches. But the "New Left," going beyond shenanigans, is out to seize control of the college system of the United States.

Spokesman for this self-styled New Left is the organization called Student for a Democratic Society. And the purpose of the SDC, according to its national vice president, is to "radically transform" the college community.

This gentleman has written: "What we don't want is a 'company union' student movement that sees itself as a body that helps a parental administration make better rules for us. What we do want is a union of students where the students themselves decide what kind of rules they want or don't want. Or whether they need rules at all."

When and if the New Left gains control, this spokesman goes on to say, it should push through a list of demands "in the form of a bill of rights" with a time limit for the college administration to reply. If the demands are met, the students should celebrate the victory. If they are not met, the students should "immediately begin mass demonstrations, sit - ins, boycott of all classes, and strikes of teaching assistants." One of the first demands, incidentally, would be an end of all grades for students.

Can this happen? Well, it has happened in many colleges and universities in South America, where communists takeover of the educational institutions has followed precisely this line. The communist conspirators always give first attention to capturing the minds of the young. H. L. H.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — "You have to make your own trip to the moon," said Ross Hunter. "There are no free rides."

Hunter is the youthful-looking former high school English teacher who now, as one of Hollywood's most successful producers, is becoming known as "the man with the box office touch."

Of the 36 films he has made since 1952 only two were financial duds, which he feels is something of a record.

"I have made a profit of $167 million for the studio," he remarked.

"Why? Because I don't make pictures for myself. I make them for the public. And what they want is to be entertained.

"Escape is a healthy word. And people are looking for a clean look in entertainment.

"European producers feel they have to give a slice of life. We feel that people get that slice of life in their own homes.

"We're on the upbeat now in Hollywood. European producers are on the downbeat. I feel that if you subject people to a neurotic film about despair, they go back to their homes and watch television, dull as that may be."

His next opus is "The Public Eye," which Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton will get a million dollars each to star in.

Ross used to be an actor himself. After a spell of teaching English in Cleveland, he put in a hitch in the Army, then took a film test and scored high.

He acted in 19 pictures —remember "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" and "Louisiana Hayride"? — and pushed his income up to $1,000 a week. His career was interrupted by an illness that sidelined him for a full year.

When he recovered nobody seemed to remember him. Unable to find work as an actor, Ross returned to teaching at $57.50 a week, spent his evenings studying producing.

"It was the best thing that could have happened to me," he recalled without bitterness. "I don't miss acting, and I don't think the public misses my acting either. I wouldn't be an actor again for anything in the world."

In a few years, as producer, Hunter climbed quickly back up the Hollywood ladder. His films include such hits as "Magnificent Obsession," "Imitation of Life," "Tammy, Tell Me True," "Flower Drum Song," and "Pillow Talk."

Among the stars he helped launch or bring to new peaks of popularity are Rock Hudson, Sandra Dee, Natalie Wood, Doris Day, Lana Turner, Hayley Mills, and Debbie Reynolds.

He is well aware that he's riding an unusual success wave, but says that if he should run into a series of flops he still has a resource available.

"I can always go back to teaching," he said cheerfully.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note: Drew Pearson, recently returned from South America, todays reports on his interview with the President of Chile.)

SANTIAGO -- President Eduardo Frei Mantalva of Chile is probably the most compulsive builder in Latin America, and when you ask him about his building his eyes sparkle and his hands gesture expressively.

Frei is building not merely houses but a nation. Today Chile is pushing, promoting, building more than at any other time in its history, and President Frei, with his Christian Democratic party, has been responsible, setting an example for all Latin America.

I talked to Frei in his office looking out over the Plaza De La Constitucion. Over his heavy mahogany desk hung a portrait of Bernardo O'Higgins, the George Washington of Chile. On the desk were a few working papers. Deep - set window sills led out to a balcony overlooking the square. And on a little telephone table was a miniature telephone keyboard identical with that of LBJ's.

President Frei has a lot in common with LBJ, as I discovered in talking with him. They are both ex - school teachers, both strong for education, both pushers for agriculture, land conservation and housing. Both, furthermore, are tall and thin.

"I was hoping to see President Johnson before April 15 when the summit conference opens," President Frei told me. "I know we would have had a lot in common. I hope to see him later in the year on a state visit."

"Tell me about your revolution without a firing squad," I asked, referring to Frei's sweeping social and economic reforms.

REVOLUTION WITHOUT FIRING

"Our chief accomplishment is education," President Frei replied, speaking English slowly and carefully. "The UNESCO in Paris cited us for having 96 per cent literacy, higher I think than any other country in the world.

"Revolution doesn't have to take the form of bloodshed and disorder. Building schools is the spirit of our revolution.

"In January and February," Frei continued, referring to the summer vacation in South America, "university students have gone south to build our schools. The government has furnished the window frames, the lumber, the locks, but the students have got the community started and they have done the rest.

"We have also increased students in our secondary schools by 40 per cent, and we have increased the basic term of education from six to eight years. Next year we will extend it to nine years.

"And we have served a million breakfasts in the public schools, together with 500,000 luncheons," said President Frei, "in part thanks to food from the United States."

The President of Chile went on to talk about the next goal of the Christian - Democratic Revolution --housing.

"Here we have not done as well as we should," he said frankly. "We plan to build 60,000 houses every year, but the cost of education may be too great. The past administration built 20,000 houses a year, and we have built, between 1964 - 1966, 45,000 houses each year. Probably we will build 55,000 this year. I am not sure. We hope to do better.

"Along with this housing program we have brought in water, lighting, built communal buildings which have laundries and libraries, and we have installed playgrounds and marketing facilities. Housing projects never had these before.

"The third goal of our revolution is health. We have organized 900 mobile health centers; we have trained nurses; and we have given, in 1966, 190 million liters of milk to mothers. In the last administration there was given only 88 million liters of milk. We have pledged 240 million for 1967. CHILE'S TOUGHEST PROBLEM

"The fourth point in our program is agrarian reform," said the President, "and this is why I could not come to the United States. That was the punishment given to me, that I could not see President Johnson -- all because of land reform."

President Frei referred to the fact that his bitterest opposition comes from the landed aristocracy in the so-called Chilean "establishment". Frei is the first President of Chile in history to take on the establishment. In neighboring Peru, where a dozen or so families own 80 per cent of the land, there has been only a small start toward land reform; but, in Chile, President Frei is in dead earnest.

"The land reform bill just passed the senate yesterday. Maybe I'll have to veto one part of it, but it will go into effect soon.

"We have another problem in connection with the land," he said, "erosion. Frankly, erosion is a greater calamity than earthquakes. This is because Chile is long and narrow, and the rivers rush down from the mountains directly into the sea. This rush of water through the centuries has been wearing our land away.

"So we have been planting trees. The last administration planted 25 million trees a year, but two days after I took office we started a program of 125 million trees the first year and 200 million the next year.

"I told the army, 'you must help,' and the army was enthusiastic. So were the students and the local communities. 'we will give you the trees,' I said. 'You can plant them'."

"Lady Bird would be pleased," I remarked.

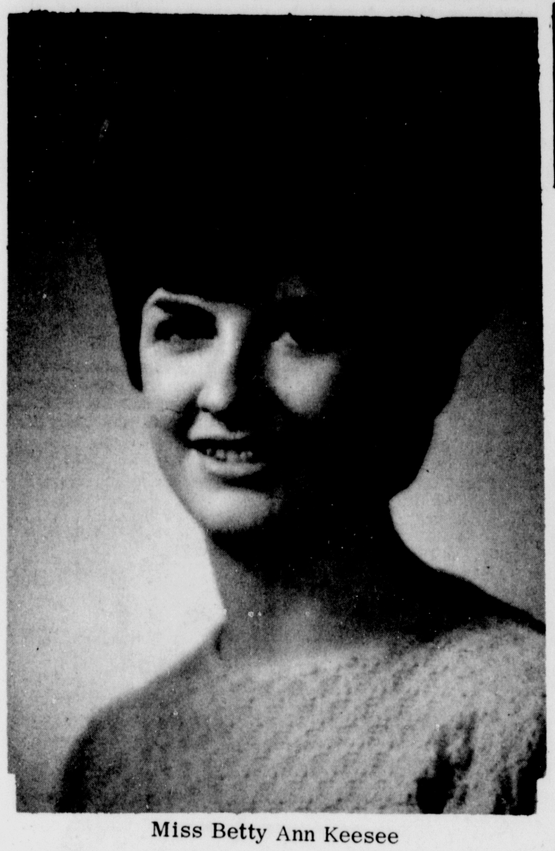

"Someday I hope she can come to Chile and see what we are doing." So spoke the dynamic President of Chile regarding his "revolution without a firing squad."

More on President Frei's goals and problems will follow shortly.

The young lieutenant, fresh from ROTC and very green, had been in the Air Force only a few months before he began to rip it apart. He was assigned to an office where his desk adjoined that of a mild-mannered and somewhat elderly captain. This individual soon became the target for all the lieutenant's complaints.

Everything was wrong, according to him. The food at the club was bad. Living conditions were deplorable. The pay, compared to what he could get in civilian life, was terribly inadequate. Worst of all, his job offered nothing challenging to a man of his ability.

"It's disgraceful how the Air Force wastes money," he said one day. "Imagine. A man of my ability stuck here. Why, an idiot could do my work."

Training Is Modernized

WOODSTOCK, Md. (AP) — The modernization movement in Roman Catholicism is reflected in the radical changes in training of priests at Woodstock College, one of the nation's foremost Jesuit seminaries.

Once the seminarians were virtually isolated in the rolling hill country 20 miles west of Baltimore. Their training was dominated by a theological system devised in the Middle Ages by St. Thomas Aquinas. And they conformed to a rigid schedule, from arising at a certain time to going to bed at a certain time. But no more.

Woodstock's president, the Very Rev. Felix F. Cardegna, said the changes here are simply a reflection of the modern age, something he said can be seen in other denominations as well as in Roman Catholicism.

Father Cardegna said that it was recognized that former methods did not equip priests to deal adequately with the problems of people who needed guidance. To help inform priests of social problems, Woodstock added a course called "Sociology of the Church."

Another new course is "Religious Anthropology," which explores the relation of religion to the cultural activities of man. Yet another new course is "The Problem of God," which includes inquiry into various modern theories, among them the "God is dead" viewpoint.

Teacher of this course, which surely would have been taboo in past times, is the Rev. John C. Murray, chief writer of the decree on religious liberty approved by the Ecumenical Council, Vatican II.

Protestant theology and the Protestant role in ecumenism also are studied.

"These days," said Father Cardegna, "the whole of theology has to be ecumenical or it's nothing. And it has to be in contact with the social problems and daily needs of people."

Of the 72 courses offered, 21 are elective. Seminarians have been going outside the school for some time to engage in social welfare work, but recently this activity has been greatly expanded.

Some students visit Baltimore each week to work in slum neighborhoods. Other seminarians pay regular visits to two nearby state mental hospitals. Others visit Protestant churches and synagogues to explain Catholicism.

Filly Elephant Separated From Love

LOS ANGELES AP -- For that filly elephant at the new Los Angeles Zoo, it was a case of love's labours lost.

The 3-year-old gray gal, enamored of a newly arrived young male African elephant closeted in the next pen, took matters into her own hands - or trunk, and tried to join him, by force.

Zoo keepers report she got halfway over the wall -- and stuck there.

Wedged tightly between boulders she'd used for climbing, the unnamed African girl pachyderm could only bellow her dismay.

And she kept bellowing, and bellowing, and bellowing, until an ear - sore crew of keepers and security guards worked her free.

She remains today in her own pen - - love unrequited.

I will always seek to discover the best and strongest points in my brother's behavior.
I will give him credit for sincerity.
I will try to avoid classifying him and assuming that he has all the characteristics of the class into which I am tempted to put him.
I will emphasize our agreements.
When others criticize, I will try to bring our favorable points.
Where there is misunderstanding, either I of him or he of me, I will go to him directly.
I will seek opportunities to pray together.

I will pray for those with whom I differ.

The young lieutenant, fresh from ROTC and very green, had been in the Air Force only a few months before he began to rip it apart. He was assigned to an office where his desk adjoined that of a mild-mannered and somewhat elderly captain. This individual soon became the target for all the lieutenant's complaints.

Everything was wrong, according to him. The food at the club was bad. Living conditions were deplorable. The pay, compared to what he could get in civilian life, was terribly inadequate. Worst of all, his job offered nothing challenging to a man of his ability.

"It's disgraceful how the Air Force wastes money," he said one day. "Imagine. A man of my ability stuck here. Why, an idiot could do my work."

Barely able to conceal his delight the captain remarked: "Well, son, you'll have to say one thing for the Air Force. Every once in a while, they get the right man in the right job."

JERRY STOVALL, St. Louis Cardinals defensive safety, will speak at the Methodist Mens club father-son banquet tomorrow night at 6:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn.

JO JO WHITE, a junior guard from St. Louis, was voted Kansas University's most valuable player by the baksetball team Monday.

White will receive the Phog Allen Award, which was established last year in honor of the long-time KU coach.

The team also elected Ron Franz, senior forward from Kansas City, Kan., captain of the team for the past season.

TWO BASKETBALL PLAYERS from Valmeyer High School, Valmeyer, Illinois have recently signed athletic scholarships to Three Rivers Junior College in Poplar Bluff. Valmeyer was one of the outstanding teams in the Southern Illinois area this year as they finished the season with a 20 won, 4 lost record. They finished in a tie with Marissa High School for the Chartres Conference Title.

The two boys that will be vieing for a spot on the Three Rivers basketball team next year are Tom Fults, 6'6" center and Terry Crouch, 6'0" guard.

Missouri's wild turkey hunters are increasing in numbers each year as is the territory in which they hunt. Many years of effort, re-stocking and development of proper habitat by the Missouri Department of Conservation and cooperation of Missouri citizens and landowners has restored the "King of the Game Birds" to hunting prominence in the show-me state.

During a five-day season in 1966, over 4,000 hunters stalked the wily gobblers in 29 countries, with 576 returning home with a trophy. Thus, about one of every eight turkey hunters was successful.

The 1967 season has been lengthened by two days and will run April 24 through 30. Also, three more countries have been added to the hunting territory. In addition, Missouri turkey hunting will be open to non-residents of the state for the first time in recent history.

Regulations for this year, as in the past, allow only one male turkey to be taken by shotgun or longbow, without the use of dogs, recorded calls or live decoys, between the hours of 5:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon (Central Standard Time). Turkey hunting permits are required and will cost $5 for resident and $25 for non-residents, plus a 30-cent service fee in each case. These permits will go on sale about April 1st.

Checking stations will be maintained in each of the open counties and again, successful hunters must check their birds with plumage intact between 7:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. on the day they were killed. However, this year, turkeys may be checked in the county where killed, or adjacent county provided it is an open turkey hunting county.

ANOTHER BANNER fishing season is shaping up at Duck Creek Wildlife Management Area here, with a report of more than 11,000 fish taken in one early-March weekend.

Dan Dickneite, area manager, said more than 3,000 anglers, many from as far away as St. Louis, fished the area during the weekend. Of the 11,000 fish caught, about 80 per cent were crappie weighing from eight ounces to two pounds. The rest were mainly largemouth bass, most of them weighing from 10 ounces to a pound and a half with at least two going five pounds.

Last season the anglers at Duck Creek made news nearly every weekend with stories of large strings of crappie, oversize bass and fishing methods that were unusual to cope with Duck Creek's unusual challenges. As in the past, fishermen wishing to try Duck Creek angling for the first time can prepare themselves for big catches and big bass -- but they must also be prepared for shallow water and usually, a lot of moss on the surface.

The shallow water and the covering of moss have resulted in development of a strange-looking procedure for bass fishing. The bass lie under the vegetation, and to get to them the fishermen have to drag weedless lures across the moss. The bass sees the shadow of the lure-- a spoon or a pork frog or something similar -- and blasts a hole in the weeds to get to it. Many times the angler will miss the mossy strike, but when he connects he has a real fight on his hands, landing bass and moss together.

Moss growth will come later in the year. Right now, methods are more nearly normal, although catching may be phenomenal.

Hearnes Announces Transfer

JEFFERSON CITY - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today announced the transfer of Elephant Rocks, a renowned natural scenic feature in Iron County, from the Department of Conservation to the Missouri Park Board.

The transfer was approved by the Conservation Commission in session here Friday.

The Conversation Department received the 135-acre tract last December as a gift to the people of Missouri from Dr. and Mrs. John S. Brown of Towson, Md. The tract includes huge granite boulders, many resembling elephants, from which the area takes its name. The feature is a popular tourist attraction, and also attracts geologists and other scientists. Dr. Brown said he wanted the property in public ownership so it could be properly cared for and preserved.

Director Carl R. Noren of the Conservation Department said the area is much more suitable for management as a park than as a wildlife area, and pointed out that the Park Board is in a better position to provide park-type management for public use of the area.

Gov. Hearnes said he welcomed the move as an example of continuing cooperation between these two agencies, as well as other related state agencies, in the interest of improved recreational opportunities for Missouri.

Park Board Director Joseph Jaeger, Jr., said the transfer will accomplish what Dr. and Mrs. Brown wanted when they made the gift last year - the best management of the area for the public use to which it is best suited.

The ability to have our own way, and at the same time convince others that they are having their own way, is rare among men. Among women it is as common as eyebrows.

DeWitz Appointed Basketball Assistant

COLUMBIA -- Roy DeWitz, former all-conference guard at Kansas State University, will become assistant basketball coach at the University of Missouri April 1, Chancellor John W. Schwada announced today.

DeWitz, coach at Augustana College at Sioux Falls, S. D., last year, will replace Glenn Cafer, whose resignation was announced last week. He was recommended by Norman Stewart, who became head coach in basketball this month.

Chancellor Schwada said that DeWitz' appointment has been approved by the Executive Board of the Board of Curators.

DeWitz, 31, was assistant basketball coach for the Kansas State Wildcats for two years and head coach at Manhattan, Kan., high school for six years. In high school coaching he had a 91-36 record. His Augustana team last season earned a 13-12 record, after a 1-21 season a year earlier.

As a Wildcat player, DeWitz was a fifth district N.C.A.A. all-American during his senior competition in 1957-58 and received honorable mention as an all-American choice. He was selected as the Wildcat's "most inspirational player" that year, and participated in two East-West college all-star games.

DeWitz, a second round draft choice of the Detroit Pistons, bypassed professional play to enter the coaching field. He is married and the father of one daughter, Christy, 2.

Marichal Signs Six-Figure Contract

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer

But the Giants' reserve catcher prefers the view from behind the plate . . . and the farther he hits, the closer he gets.

Hiatt led off the 10th inning Monday with a towering home run, giving San Francisco a 3-2 exhibition victory over the California Angels . . . who dealt him to the Giants in 1964 for outfielder Jose Cardenal.

Marichal, meanwhile, showed up at the Giants' Phoenix, Ariz., camp, signed his first six-figure contract and promised he'll be ready to pitch in the April 11 season opener at St. Louis. The Dominican right-hander, a 25-game winner in 1966, was the last of this year's holdouts.

"I feel I'm in good condition and ready to go right to work," said Marichal, who'll likely made his first spring appearance Friday against the Angels.

Hiatt, a 24-year-old Californian who also plays first base and the outfield, connected off Angels right-hander Jim Coates in the 10th, snapping a 2-2 deadlock.

Hiatt got into 18 games with the Giants last season and hit .304 after spending most of the year with Phoenix in the Pacific Coast League, where he had a .270 mark and 13 homers.

The long ball made the difference in three other games on Monday's exhibition schedule. Sam Bowens' three-run homer lifted Baltimore past Washington 4-3, two tainted homers gave Pittsburgh a 5-4 nod over Los Angeles and Atlanta cracked five homers in trimming Boston 6-1.

The Chicago White Sox downed the New York yankees 12-7 in a 31-hit struggle, Houston edged Minnesota 7-6 on Dave Adlesh's RBI single in the 12th inning, Cincinnati whipped St. Louis 7-4, the Chicago Cubs edged Cleveland 5-4 and the Kansas City-Philadelphia game ended in a 2-2 tie when rain stopped play after nine innings.

A scheduled night game between the New York Mets and Detroit Tigers was washed out by rain.

Bowens connected off Washington's Camilo Pascual, who was making his first exhibition appearance, following two walks in the seventh inning. Pascual had doubled home a run in the top of the inning to give the Senators a 2-1 lead.

Dodgers' center fielder Jim Hickman missed a shoestring bid for Andre Rodgers' liner with two on in the fifth inning and it went for an inside-the-park homer. Willie Stargell's sixth-inning shot tipped left fielder Bob Bailey's glove and went over the fence for a two-run homer that won it for the Pirates.

Felipe Alou, Denis Menke, Mack Jones and Rico Carty all homered for Atlanta off ex-Brave Hank Fisher and Clete Boyer rapped a two-run homer in the eighth against Dan Osinski, another former Brave.

The White Sox rapped out 17 hits and battered Mel Stottlemyre for five runs in the eighth inning to outscore the Yankees. Triples by Ken Berry and Tom McCraw sparked the deciding rally.

Clay May Be 16 Away

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston draft board spokesman says the normal churning of administrative machinery could produce an Army private named Cassius Clay 16 days from now if the heavyweight champ's court fights with the Selective Service system fail.

Clay's draft board in Louisville, his old home town, said Monday it had granted his request for induction into the Army in Houston, his new home town. His old orders told him to report in Louisville on April 11.

Clay's managers announced a suspension of talks about future title defenses and, as Muhammad Ali, Black Muslim minister, Clay remained in Dallas, recruiting converts for Allah.

He paused to tell reporters, "If I thought it would bring freedom, justice and equality for 22 million so-called Negroes, you wouldn't have to draft me. I'd join tomorrow."

The induction switch from Louisville to Houston meant an automatic delay described as "indefinite," but Mrs. Josie W. Koonce, chief clerk for all Houston draft boards, said that "indefinite" under law meant a minimum of one day and probably will mean no more than three weeks or a month at most.

She said it is up to the Army now to decide whether or not it will accept Clay from among the other Houston draftees and out-of-town draftees sent its way.

"As far as I've found, there's no reason why he won't be inducted," she said. "We don't know what dates we have on our calls. Some calls are in April, but our calls are small now."

"Golfers Tee Off Wednesday."

Bulldog golfers will travel to Poplar Bluff on Wednesday to open the 1967 season. The Dogs will go against the Mules at Westwood Hills Country Club.

This first match will be one of the toughest of the year because of the keen competition to be faced. The Mules will have most of last year's team back including "Beto" Jett, a senior who won the district match his sophomore year.

Last year the Bulldogs fell to the Mules, 173-165, but the Dogs will be fighting hard to bring a victory in their first match.

The dual meet will begin around 3:30 p.m.

Hearnes Announces Transfer

JEFFERSON CITY - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today announced the transfer of Elephant Rocks, a renowned natural scenic feature in Iron County, from the Department of Conservation to the Missouri Park Board.

The transfer was approved by the Conservation Commission in session here Friday.

The Conversation Department received the 135-acre tract last December as a gift to the people of Missouri from Dr. and Mrs. John S. Brown of Towson, Md. The tract includes huge granite boulders, many resembling elephants, from which the area takes its name. The feature is a popular tourist attraction, and also attracts geologists and other scientists. Dr. Brown said he wanted the property in public ownership so it could be properly cared for and preserved.

Director Carl R. Noren of the Conservation Department said the area is much more suitable for management as a park than as a wildlife area, and pointed out that the Park Board is in a better position to provide park-type management for public use of the area.

Gov. Hearnes said he welcomed the move as an example of continuing cooperation between these two agencies, as well as other related state agencies, in the interest of improved recreational opportunities for Missouri.

Park Board Director Joseph Jaeger, Jr., said the transfer will accomplish what Dr. and Mrs. Brown wanted when they made the gift last year - the best management of the area for the public use to which it is best suited.

The ability to have our own way, and at the same time convince others that they are having their own way, is rare among men. Among women it is as common as eyebrows.

Marichal Signs Six-Figure Contract

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer

But the Giants' reserve catcher prefers the view from behind the plate . . . and the farther he hits, the closer he gets.

Hiatt led off the 10th inning Monday with a towering home run, giving San Francisco a 3-2 exhibition victory over the California Angels . . . who dealt him to the Giants in 1964 for outfielder Jose Cardenal.

Marichal, meanwhile, showed up at the Giants' Phoenix, Ariz., camp, signed his first six-figure contract and promised he'll be ready to pitch in the April 11 season opener at St. Louis. The Dominican right-hander, a 25-game winner in 1966, was the last of this year's holdouts.

"I feel I'm in good condition and ready to go right to work," said Marichal, who'll likely made his first spring appearance Friday against the Angels.

Hiatt, a 24-year-old Californian who also plays first base and the outfield, connected off Angels right-hander Jim Coates in the 10th, snapping a 2-2 deadlock.

Hiatt got into 18 games with the Giants last season and hit .304 after spending most of the year with Phoenix in the Pacific Coast League, where he had a .270 mark and 13 homers.

The long ball made the difference in three other games on Monday's exhibition schedule. Sam Bowens' three-run homer lifted Baltimore past Washington 4-3, two tainted homers gave Pittsburgh a 5-4 nod over Los Angeles and Atlanta cracked five homers in trimming Boston 6-1.

The Chicago White Sox downed the New York yankees 12-7 in a 31-hit struggle, Houston edged Minnesota 7-6 on Dave Adlesh's RBI single in the 12th inning, Cincinnati whipped St. Louis 7-4, the Chicago Cubs edged Cleveland 5-4 and the Kansas City-Philadelphia game ended in a 2-2 tie when rain stopped play after nine innings.

A scheduled night game between the New York Mets and Detroit Tigers was washed out by rain.

Bowens connected off Washington's Camilo Pascual, who was making his first exhibition appearance, following two walks in the seventh inning. Pascual had doubled home a run in the top of the inning to give the Senators a 2-1 lead.

Dodgers' center fielder Jim Hickman missed a shoestring bid for Andre Rodgers' liner with two on in the fifth inning and it went for an inside-the-park homer. Willie Stargell's sixth-inning shot tipped left fielder Bob Bailey's glove and went over the fence for a two-run homer that won it for the Pirates.

Felipe Alou, Denis Menke, Mack Jones and Rico Carty all homered for Atlanta off ex-Brave Hank Fisher and Clete Boyer rapped a two-run homer in the eighth against Dan Osinski, another former Brave.

The White Sox rapped out 17 hits and battered Mel Stottlemyre for five runs in the eighth inning to outscore the Yankees. Triples by Ken Berry and Tom McCraw sparked the deciding rally.

DeWitz Appointed Basketball Assistant

COLUMBIA -- Roy DeWitz, former all-conference guard at Kansas State University, will become assistant basketball coach at the University of Missouri April 1, Chancellor John W. Schwada announced today.

DeWitz, coach at Augustana College at Sioux Falls, S. D., last year, will replace Glenn Cafer, whose resignation was announced last week. He was recommended by Norman Stewart, who became head coach in basketball this month.

Chancellor Schwada said that DeWitz' appointment has been approved by the Executive Board of the Board of Curators.

DeWitz, 31, was assistant basketball coach for the Kansas State Wildcats for two years and head coach at Manhattan, Kan., high school for six years. In high school coaching he had a 91-36 record. His Augustana team last season earned a 13-12 record, after a 1-21 season a year earlier.

As a Wildcat player, DeWitz was a fifth district N.C.A.A. all-American during his senior competition in 1957-58 and received honorable mention as an all-American choice. He was selected as the Wildcat's "most inspirational player" that year, and participated in two East-West college all-star games.

DeWitz, a second round draft choice of the Detroit Pistons, bypassed professional play to enter the coaching field. He is married and the father of one daughter, Christy, 2.

Clay May Be 16 Away

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston draft board spokesman says the normal churning of administrative machinery could produce an Army private named Cassius Clay 16 days from now if the heavyweight champ's court fights with the Selective Service system fail.

Clay's draft board in Louisville, his old home town, said Monday it had granted his request for induction into the Army in Houston, his new home town. His old orders told him to report in Louisville on April 11.

Clay's managers announced a suspension of talks about future title defenses and, as Muhammad Ali, Black Muslim minister, Clay remained in Dallas, recruiting converts for Allah.

He paused to tell reporters, "If I thought it would bring freedom, justice and equality for 22 million so-called Negroes, you wouldn't have to draft me. I'd join tomorrow."

The induction switch from Louisville to Houston meant an automatic delay described as "indefinite," but Mrs. Josie W. Koonce, chief clerk for all Houston draft boards, said that "indefinite" under law meant a minimum of one day and probably will mean no more than three weeks or a month at most.

She said it is up to the Army now to decide whether or not it will accept Clay from among the other Houston draftees and out-of-town draftees sent its way.

"As far as I've found, there's no reason why he won't be inducted," she said. "We don't know what dates we have on our calls. Some calls are in April, but our calls are small now."

"Golfers Tee Off Wednesday."

Bulldog golfers will travel to Poplar Bluff on Wednesday to open the 1967 season. The Dogs will go against the Mules at Westwood Hills Country Club.

This first match will be one of the toughest of the year because of the keen competition to be faced. The Mules will have most of last year's team back including "Beto" Jett, a senior who won the district match his sophomore year.

Last year the Bulldogs fell to the Mules, 173-165, but the Dogs will be fighting hard to bring a victory in their first match.

The dual meet will begin around 3:30 p.m.

Restraints Bewilder U.S. Pilots in Vietnam

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, gave a vivid report Sunday on some of the things that American troops in Vietnam are saying about the way the war is being run from Washington.

He said, as one example, that American pilots are bewildered by rules imposed in Washington forbidding them to attack Communist aircraft on the ground or to bomb Communist air bases.

The pilots told him that highly advanced Russian-build MIG fighter planes are given immunity on the ground and then take to the air to fire at American planes from the rear, the senator said.

Many American casualties have been caused by these limitations, and many bombing missions have been abandoned in flight so that American planes would have a better chance of defending themselves against the MIGs, the senator said.

"All the commanders in the field have recommended that we hit the airfields," an American pilot told the senator at an American base.

Symington filed a detailed report with the Senate on his year-end trip through southeast Asia, the Middle East, and southern Europe.

The most compelling part consisted of verbatim interviews with men doing the actual fighting.

Under his questioning, many airmen expressed their perplexity over Washington's "rules of engagement," which often force the Americans to fight under the most difficult conditions.

The interview with an unidentified pilot went like this:

Symington: Have any of you been near enemy airfields?

PILOT: Twenty times I've been across the Phuc Yen airfield not far from Hanoi. No one of us has ever dropped a bomb on it.

We see a MIG-21 taxi out and takeoff, then the next thing you know, he's at your six o'clock (directly in the rear).

They (the Communist) are well trained, well disciplined, and carry out excellent maneuvers. Within the last couple of weeks, there's been a marked increase in their activity, a hell of a lot more of them.

They coordinate their attacks well - fly right through their flak - and then they are right there in formation with us when we are about to start our attacks.

Symington: How many missions do you have?

Individual pilots: 79,55, 52, 75, 40, 39, 36, 15, 93, 70.

Symington: Do the MIGs knocked down any of our aircraft with air-to-air missiles?

Pilot: Yes.

Symington: What kind of missiles?

Pilot: Beam rider. Went right up his tail pipe and broke the aircraft in two.

Symington: Do you think that if you could hit those MIGs in their revetments (on the ground), you could get them?

Pilot: Yes, and we'd like to put some holes in their runway while they're airborne too.

Symington: What reason do they give you for not doing this?

Pilot: Escalation, sir. But the enemy already has escalated the war in the air.

Symington: What ever happened to my friend Colonel Nelson whom I talked with out here this time last year? He was the vice commander here.

Symington: The tenor has changed lately as a result of increased MIG activity, but you've not gone after airfields. Why?

Pilot: No reason given. All the military commanders in the field have recommended that we hit the airfields.

Symington: But you don't attack the airports. What effect has this had?

Pilot: They (the Communists) know we aren't doing anything about them, so they operate accordingly.

At another base, Sen. Symington said in his report, "two pilots told me that the greatest proof of the morale and discipline of the U.S. Air Force was that nobody yet had dumped a lot of bombs unintentionally on Phuc Yen, where they saw MIGs wheeling into line to get behind them and attack them from the rear."

The senator's own appraisal of the prohibition against hitting the MIGs on the ground: "It just doesn't make sense."

The only effective way to destroy an enemy air force, he said, is to "destroy him on the ground."

There is nothing more base than to find fault with that which thou dost not understand. That view vilifies everything; it produces but bitterness and discord. Therefore, let us candidly interpret other men's work and not esteem our own as oracles, nor look upon the judgments of those men who do not understand what they read. Where there is hatred in judgment, judgment is blind.

CONGRESSIONAL PLAN SHIFTS OUTSTATE MISSOURI

JEFFERSON CITY -- Outstate Missouri would be shifted around in major proportions under a much worked-over congressional reapportionment bill which was reported out of Sen. Omer Avery's reapportionment committee last week.

Senate Majority Leader William B. Waters (D-Liberty) said the bill would be given top priority after the Legislature's Easter vacation, which began last Thursday for the Senate.

Under the proposal, the Eighth District undergoes the greatest realignment, losing 7 counties and gaining three St. Louis townships -- those of Bonhomme, Lemay and Meramec-- and Howard and Osage counties.

Under the committee proposal, which is a revised version of Sen. Avery's original reapportionment bill, the Fourth District would be composed of Wards 15 and 24 in Kansas City and the following townships in Jackson County: Washington, Blue, Brooking, Fort Osage, Van Buren, Prairie and Sni-A-Bar; and the following counties: Bates, Cass, Vernon, Henry, Johnson, Lafayette, Saline, St. Clair, Carroll, Charlton and Pettis.

The Ninth District would be comprised by the counties of: Schuyler, Scotland, Clark, Knox, Lewis, Shelby, Marion, Randolph, Monroe, Ralls, Audrain, Pike, Callaway, Boone, Montgomery, Lincoln, Warren, Gasconade, Franklin and St. Charles, and the following townships in St. Louis County: Spanish Lake and Florissant.

The revised plan would allow Sen. Earl Blackwell (D-Hillsboro) to run against Rep. Ichord, as he said he would like to, and would open up a wider area of contenders for the Tenth District seat, when Rep. Paul Jones retires after this term.

TENTATIVE APPROVAL GIVEN TO STATE FAIR FUND BILL

The House has given tentative approval to a bill which would allow admission charges to the Missouri State Fair to be raised to one dollar -- rather than the present maximum of 50 cents.

In an effort to bring the State Fair out of past financial difficulties, the bill also would allow the Commissioner of Agriculture to rent the State Fair buildings and grounds for other uses when the fair is not being held.

Formerly these buildings have had to remain idle nearly 11 months out of the year with no revenue coming from them.

BILL WOULD REQUIRE 'TARPING' TRUCK LOADS

How often have you been driving down the highway when a rock has fallen from a gravel truck in front of you, cracking or chipping your windshield?

The Missouri House is seeking to remedy this and similar situations and has given tentative approval to a bill which would require trucks and trailers to cover any loads which might blow off the vehicle.

It also would make it a misdemeanor to violate the provisions of the bill.

BILL MAKES ARSON IN FORESTS A FELONY

Conservationists and sportsmen alike have lauded the passage by the Missouri House of Representatives a bill which would make it a felony to wilfully start a forest fire.

With the increase of the timber industry in missouri, the destruction of such forests can amount to several thousands of dollars in damages, let alone the loss of animal life and refuge.

The former penalty was only a misdemeanor. The current bill, if passed by the Senate, would provide for a 90-day to one-year sentence in a county jail, or from two to five years in a state prison.

BILL WOULD ALLOW ELDERLY TO LIVE WITH RELATIVES

The Missouri House has given tentative approval to and is expected to pass a bill which would allow elderly citizens, over 65 and receiving pension benefits from the state, to live with their relatives -- making their present income the only basis for determining the amount of pension payments.

This bill would apply to those receiving state benefits who are incapacitated from working.

Restraints Bewilder U.S. Pilots in Vietnam

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, gave a vivid report Sunday on some of the things that American troops in Vietnam are saying about the way the war is being run from Washington.

He said, as one example, that American pilots are bewildered by rules imposed in Washington forbidding them to attack Communist aircraft on the ground or to bomb Communist air bases.

The pilots told him that highly advanced Russian-build MIG fighter planes are given immunity on the ground and then take to the air to fire at American planes from the rear, the senator said.

Many American casualities have been caused by these limitations, and many bombing missions have been abandoned in flight so that American planes would have a better chance of defending themselves against the MIGs, the senator said.

"All the commanders in the field have recommended that we hit the airfields," an American pilot told the senator at an American base.

Symington filed a detailed report with the Senate on his year-end trip through southeast Asia, the Middle East, and southern Europe.

The most compelling part consisted of verbatim interviews with men doing the actual fighting.

Under his questioning, many airmen expressed their perplexity over Washington's "rules of engagement," which often force the Americans to fight under the most difficult conditions.

The interview with an unidentified pilot went like this:

Symington: Have any of you been near enemy airfields?

PILOT: Twenty times I've been across the Phuc Yen airfield not far from Hanoi. No one of us has ever dropped a bomb on it.

We see a MIG-21 taxi out and takeoff, then the next thing you know, he's at your six o'clock (directly in the rear).

They (the Communist) are well trained, well disciplined, and carry out excellent maneuvers. Within the last couple of weeks, there's been a marked increase in their activity, a hell of a lot more of them.

They coordinate their attacks well - fly right through their flak - and then they are right there in formation with us when we are about to start our attacks.

Symington: How many missions do you have?

Individual pilots: 79,55, 52, 75, 40, 39, 36, 15, 93, 70.

Symington: Do the MIGs knocked down any of our aircraft with air-to-air missiles?

Pilot: Yes.

Symington: What kind of missiles?

Pilot: Beam rider. Went right up his tail pipe and broke the aircraft in two.

Symington: Do you think that if you could hit those MIGs in their revetments (on the ground), you could get them?

Pilot: Yes, and we'd like to put some holes in their runway while they're airborne too.

Symington: What reason do they give you for not doing this?

Pilot: Escalation, sir. But the enemy already has escalated the war in the air.

Symington: What ever happened to my friend Colonel Nelson whom I talked with out here this time last year? He was the vice commander here.

Symington: The tenor has changed lately as a result of increased MIG activity, but you've not gone after airfields. Why?

Pilot: No reason given. All the military commanders in the field have recommended that we hit the airfields.

Symington: But you don't attack the airports. What effect has this had?

Pilot: They (the Communists) know we aren't doing anything about them, so they operate accordingly.

At another base, Sen. Symington said in his report, "two pilots told me that the greatest proof of the morale and discipline of the U.S. Air Force was that nobody yet had dumped a lot of bombs unintentionally on Phuc Yen, where they saw MIGs wheeling into line to get behind them and attack them from the rear."

The senator's own appraisal of the prohibition against hitting the MIGs on the ground: "It just doesn't make sense."

The only effective way to destroy an enemy air force, he said, is to "destroy him on the ground."

There is nothing more base than to find fault with that which thou dost not understand. That view vilifies everything; it produces but bitterness and discord. Therefore, let us candidly interpret other men's work and not esteem our own as oracles, nor look upon the judgments of those men who do not understand what they read. Where there is hatred in judgment, judgment is blind.

CONGRESSIONAL PLAN SHIFTS OUTSTATE MISSOURI

JEFFERSON CITY -- Outstate Missouri would be shifted around in major proportions under a much worked-over congressional reapportionment bill which was reported out of Sen. Omer Avery's reapportionment committee last week.

Senate Majority Leader William B. Waters (D-Liberty) said the bill would be given top priority after the Legislature's Easter vacation, which began last Thursday for the Senate.

Under the proposal, the Eighth District undergoes the greatest realignment, losing 7 counties and gaining three St. Louis townships -- those of Bonhomme, Lemay and Meramec-- and Howard and Osage counties.

This district, now represented by Rep. Richard H. Ichord (D-Houston), would lose the counties of Boone, Shannon, Reynolds, Carter, Iron, Madison and Saline.

Under the committee proposal, which is a revised version of Sen. Avery's original reapportionment bill, the Fourth District would be composed of Wards 15 and 24 in Kansas City and the following townships in Jackson County: Washington, Blue, Brooking, Fort Osage, Van Buren, Prairie and Sni-A-Bar; and the following counties: Bates, Cass, Vernon, Henry, Johnson, Lafayette, Saline, St. Clair, Carroll, Charlton and Pettis.

The Ninth District would be comprised by the counties of: Schuyler, Scotland, Clark, Knox, Lewis, Shelby, Marion, Randolph, Monroe, Ralls, Audrain, Pike, Callaway, Boone, Montgomery, Lincoln, Warren, Gasconade, Franklin and St. Charles, and the following townships in St. Louis County: Spanish Lake and Florissant.

The revised plan would allow Sen. Earl Blackwell (D-Hillsboro) to run against Rep. Ichord, as he said he would like to, and would open up a wider area of contenders for the Tenth District seat, when Rep. Paul Jones retires after this term.

TENTATIVE APPROVAL GIVEN TO STATE FAIR FUND BILL

The House has given tentative approval to a bill which would allow admission charges to the Missouri State Fair to be raised to one dollar -- rather than the present maximum of 50 cents.

In an effort to bring the State Fair out of past financial difficulties, the bill also would allow the Commissioner of Agriculture to rent the State Fair buildings and grounds for other uses when the fair is not being held.

Formerly these buildings have had to remain idle nearly 11 months out of the year with no revenue coming from them.

BILL WOULD REQUIRE 'TARPING' TRUCK LOADS

How often have you been driving down the highway when a rock has fallen from a gravel truck in front of you, cracking or chipping your windshield?

The Missouri House is seeking to remedy this and similar situations and has given tentative approval to a bill which would require trucks and trailers to cover any loads which might blow off the vehicle.

It also would make it a misdemeanor to violate the provisions of the bill.

BILL MAKES ARSON IN FORESTS A FELONY

Conservationists and sportsmen alike have lauded the passage by the Missouri House of Representatives a bill which would make it a felony to wilfully start a forest fire.

With the increase of the timber industry in missouri, the destruction of such forests can amount to several thousands of dollars in damages, let alone the loss of animal life and refuge.

The former penalty was only a misdemeanor. The current bill, if passed by the Senate, would provide for a 90-day to one-year sentence in a county jail, or from two to five years in a state prison.

BILL WOULD ALLOW ELDERLY TO LIVE WITH RELATIVES

The Missouri House has given tentative approval to and is expected to pass a bill which would allow elderly citizens, over 65 and receiving pension benefits from the state, to live with their relatives -- making their present income the only basis for determining the amount of pension payments.

This bill would apply to those receiving state benefits who are incapacitated from working.

Scott AFB Trains Air Rescuemen

The 22-year-old airman from Peoria, Ill., and other pararescuemen like him helped save the lives of 403 downed allied airmen in Vietnam in 1966.

Pararescuemen are the hub of the Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service, a division of the military airlift command which has headquarters at Scott Air Force Base in southern Illinois near St. Louis.

These men, who wear maroon berets and train by parachuting into pine trees, go into the jungles and seas to prepare crashed airplane crews for rescue. They administer first aid, fight sharks and hold off the Viet Cong or North Vietnamese soldiers with small arms fire while the rescue is in progress.

At last count, air rescuemen in Vietnam had won 1,800 awards and decorations for work under fire. The 38th Aerospace Rescue Squadron and its 3rd Rescue and Recovery group have received presidential unit citations.

In addition to going down directly to the men who need help, the pararescuemen also operate the hoists used to pluck airmen from calm seas.

For his rescue work Hassler was named military airlift command's outstanding airman for 1967. He is a crew member on a HH-3 Jolly Green Giant helicopter used to recover pilots down in Southeast Asia.

Walther said that in Viet Nam it's "hard to tell the good guys from the bad guys. They don't wear white hats and black hats."

Another danger rescuemen must face is exploding shells from burning aircraft. "those 20 milimeter shells cook-off for many hours," Walther said. "When they go, it's just like a hand grenade. At Bien Hoa a fireman standing between two of my pararescuemen was killed by an exploding 20 milimeter."

Capt. John B. Kneen, 31, of Belvidere Center, Vt., pilots a rescue helicopter.

Dentist Explains Programs for School Children

POPLAR BLUFF -- At a meeting of public health nurses Dr. Ralph Knowles of Jefferson City, public health dentist, pointed out that dental defects in school children have been considered the most perplexing of all school health problems.

He said only six out of 23 counties in district 4 of the Missouri division of health employ public health dentists, either working from an office in the county health center or from mobile units.

The public dental program is possible only in counties paying county or city taxes for public health services. These counties are New Madrid, Bollinger, Ripley, Wayne Reynolds and ron, Dr. Knowles pointed out.

There are a variety of sources of funds for county dental programs. One source now used frequently is the federal government acting through Title I of the primary and secondary education act, Dr. Knowles said.

Under this act, each school district receives an amount of money based on family income and the number of aid to dependent children recipients in the school.

There are also many state plans for reimbursing counties for money spent on dental programs, he pointed out.

Sometime before 1975, Dr. Knowles said, the state must provide "comprehensive dental services" to ADC families and other low income individuals.

He pointed out that a new bill has been introduced which will provide funds for dental programs through the Social Security Administration.

The average cost to the county for dental services is $15,400 yearly, depending on the type of equipment used and the type of service, Dr. Knowles concluded.

Jackson Defeats School Bond

JACKSON -- The $495,000 bond issue of Jackson R-2 school district was defeated for a second time in balloting Thursday.

The voter turn-out was larger than on the first election Feb. 28 and this time failed to give the issue a simple majority, 595-604.

Poverty War Reviewed Secretly

PORTAGEVILLE -- The board of directors of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Commission will meet here Wednesday night to review the dismissal of Bill Graves, assistant director of the DAEOC, and Lloyd Phillips, director of the Head Start program.

The pair was dismissed two weeks ago on the basis of an audit of DAEOC's program taken a year ago by OEO officials from Kansas City. At the time Graves and Phillips were assistants to director Earl Williams. Just before the audit took place, Williams was dismissed by the board for incompetency.

The OEO audit revealed that the administration of the program was not on the level it should have been. Irregular administrative procedures, including the practice of dual employment, were cited by regional officials as reasons for the poor report.

Shortly thereafter, Graves and Phillips met with officials of the regional office, and cleared up the matter of dual employment. Reports later showed Graves had not been implicated in the situation, and Phillips' stand was clarified to the point where OEO officials recommended no further action be taken.

In identical letters requesting the hearing, Graves and Phillips pointed out to directors that they were not administrative heads of DAEOC during the period covered by the regional audit, and also challenged the validity of the board that dismissed them.

The letters also asserted impropriety, political and otherwise, in the dismissal action. "Inasmuch as no reason whatever has been stated, . .and inasmuch as I have committed no act or omission which could give cause for my dismissal, such dismissal must have been for political or other improper cause.

Bob Edwards, president of the DAEOC board of directors, said Saturday the meeting Wednesday night would be a secret meeting of the directors and would be closed to the public.

Earlier Edwards had indicated that he strongly favored having the hearing open. "The poverty program is a public matter, and there should be no secrets in it."

Highway Litter Costs $11 per Mile to Remove

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - It cost more than $11 a mile to pick up the litter along 32,000 miles of the Missouri highway system last year, the State Highway Department reported today.

Total cost was $360,160. Tossing litter from automobiles to the roadside is a misdemeanor but it gets done anyway.

The pickup job ranged from a high of $81,726 for District 7, with headquarters at Joplin, to $13,014 for comparatively tidy District 2 with headquarters at Macon, the department said.

Scott AFB Trains Air Rescuemen

The 22-year-old airman from Peoria, Ill., and other pararescuemen like him helped save the lives of 403 downed allied airmen in Vietnam in 1966.

Pararescuemen are the hub of the Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service, a division of the military airlift command which has headquarters at Scott Air Force Base in southern Illinois near St. Louis.

These men, who wear maroon berets and train by parachuting into pine trees, go into the jungles and seas to prepare crashed airplane crews for rescue. They administer first aid, fight sharks and hold off the Viet Cong or North Vietnamese soldiers with small arms fire while the rescue is in progress.

At last count, air rescuemen in Vietnam had won 1,800 awards and decorations for work under fire. The 38th Aerospace Rescue Squadron and its 3rd Rescue and Recovery group have received presidential unit citations.

In addition to going down directly to the men who need help, the pararescuemen also operate the hoists used to pluck airmen from calm seas.

For his rescue work Hassler was named military airlift command's outstanding airman for 1967. He is a crew member on a HH-3 Jolly Green Giant helicopter used to recover pilots down in Southeast Asia.

Another pararescueman is 34-year-old Chuck Walther of Parkersburg, W. Va., who recently completed a year's duty at Bien Hoa. During the period he collected 13 medals for courage and professionalism under combat conditions.

Walther said that in Viet Nam it's "hard to tell the good guys from the bad guys. They don't wear white hats and black hats."

Another danger rescuemen must face is exploding shells from burning aircraft. "those 20 milimeter shells cook-off for many hours," Walther said. "When they go, it's just like a hand grenade. At Bien Hoa a fireman standing between two of my pararescuemen was killed by an exploding 20 milimeter."

Capt. John B. Kneen, 31, of Belvidere Center, Vt., pilots a rescue helicopter.

Jimmy Vest on Select List

HENDERSON, Tenn. -- Jimmy Vest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Vest, 806 Brawley, Sikeston, Mo., has been selected by a committee of faculty, administration and students to be included in Who's Who at Freed-Hardeman College.

Vest, a third-year student, is a Bible major.

Selection is based on the student's academic record, leadership, participation in extra-curricular activities, citizenship and promise of future usefulness.

Dentist Explains Programs for School Children

POPLAR BLUFF -- At a meeting of public health nurses Dr. Ralph Knowles of Jefferson City, public health dentist, pointed out that dental defects in school children have been considered the most perplexing of all school health problems.

He said only six out of 23 counties in district 4 of the Missouri division of health employ public health dentists, either working from an office in the county health center or from mobile units.

The public dental program is possible only in counties paying county or city taxes for pub. health services. These counties are New Madrid, Bollinger, Ripley, Wayne Reynolds and ron, Dr. Knowles pointed out.

There are a variety of sources of funds for county dental programs. One source now used frequently is the federal government acting through Title I of the primary and secondary education act, Dr. Knowles said.

Under this act, each school district receives an amount of money based on family income and the number of aid to dependent children recipients in the school.

There are also many state plans for reimbursing counties for money spent on dental programs, he pointed out.

Sometime before 1975, Dr. Knowles said, the state must provide "comprehensive dental services" to ADC families and other low income individuals.

He pointed out that a new bill has been introduced which will provide funds for dental programs through the Social Security Administration.

The average cost to the county for dental services is $15,400 yearly, depending on the type of equipment used and the type of service, Dr. Knowles concluded.

MAKING THE BEST of a snowy situation, members of the freshman class of North Park College in Chicago constructed a church out of the plenteous building material that fell on that city recently. Jackson Defeats School Bond

JACKSON -- The $495,000 bond issue of Jackson R-2 school district was defeated for a second time in balloting Thursday.

Poverty War Reviewed Secretly

PORTAGEVILLE -- The board of directors of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Commission will meet here Wednesday night to review the dismissal of Bill Graves, assistant director of the DAEOC, and Lloyd Phillips, director of the Head Start program.

The pair was dismissed two weeks ago on the basis of an audit of DAEOC's program taken a year ago by OEO officials from Kansas City. At the time Graves and Phillips were assistants to director Earl Williams. Just before the audit took place, Williams was dismissed by the board for incompetency.

The OEO audit revealed that the administration of the program was not on the level it should have been. Irregular administrative procedures, including the practice of dual employment, were cited by regional officials as reasons for the poor report.

Shortly thereafter, Graves and Phillips met with officials of the regional office, and cleared up the matter of dual employment. Reports later showed Graves had not been implicated in the situation, and Phillips' stand was clarified to the point where OEO officials recommended no further action be taken.

In identical letters requesting the hearing, Graves and Phillips pointed out to directors that they were not administrative heads of DAEOC during the period covered by the regional audit, and also challenged the validity of the board that dismissed them.

The letters also asserted impropriety, political and otherwise, in the dismissal action. "Inasmuch as no reason whatever has been stated, . .and inasmuch as I have committed no act or omission which could give cause for my dismissal, such dismissal must have been for political or other improper cause.

Bob Edwards, president of the DAEOC board of directors, said Saturday the meeting Wednesday night would be a secret meeting of the directors and would be closed to the public.

Earlier Edwards had indicated that he strongly favored having the hearing open. "The poverty program is a public matter, and there should be no secrets in it."

Highway Litter Costs $11 per Mile to Remove

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - It cost more than $11 a mile to pick up the litter along 32,000 miles of the Missouri highway system last year, the State Highway Department reported today.

Total cost was $360,160. Tossing litter from automobiles to the roadside is a misdemeanor but it gets done anyway.

The pickup job ranged from a high of $81,726 for District 7, with headquarters at Joplin, to $13,014 for comparatively tidy District 2 with headquarters at Macon, the department said.

"When I went to a discoteque the first time, they wouldn't let me in -- they said my pants were too loose." --Actor John Cullum

From The Upper Room

He was seen of James; then of all the apostles. And last of all he was seen of me also. (I Corinthians 15:7-8)

Looking Back Over The Years

50 years ago
March 28, 1917

Roscoe Gilbreath drove a Stutz touring car from Indianapolis to Sikeston last week. William Hunter of Morley brought the car and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbreath will leave Saturday for Indianapolis to bring another one down next week.

J. L. Tanner went to Cape Girardeau Wednesday and drove his new automobile home. It is an 8 cylinder, seven passenger car with all modern appliances, including the ventilators in the hood. The body is painted a Brewster green.

W. E. Derris of this city and Miss Lillian Brooks of St. Louis were quietly married in Benton on March 29.

A fire was discovered Tuesday noon in the Sikeston Hotel on West Malone and Scott streets. The fire originated in an upstairs room from an unknown cause, and burned through the roof before it was extinguished.

40 years ago
March 28, 1927

Miss Martha Woods, a graduate of Southern Illinois Normal School, and daughter of Mayor Woods of Cairo, Ill., has been elected to finish out the school year in the place left vacant in the grade school by the resignation of Miss Nellie Hayden.

Jack Boyer, nephew of M. L. Gresham, recently purchased Howell's Cafe from Bob Joyner and will operate the same as Boyer's Cafe from this time forth. Mr. Boyer comes to Sikeston from Philadelphia, Pa.

A drive to obtain sustaining memberships from the Sikeston Public Library will be started Thursday as the result of action taken by representatives of 24 Sikeston organizations Friday night at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I am sick of people looking at doctors as if they were God or something. I had an experience that I wish you would print. It would help put things in the proper perspective.

I had major surgery recently. A few days after the operation my doctor came by for a routine check. After chatting a few minutes he said he was sure he had lost his pencil in my bed. I said I didn't think it was possible, but he ignored me and began to tear the bed apart. After about 10 minutes of rummaging around he found the pencil in his pocket. Every bit of linen was off the bed by that time and the pillow case was turned inside out and thrown on the floor.

I mentioned this incident to a friend and was told the doctor was testing my reaction. I was not in a psychiatric hospital and I can't understand this sort of thing.

Please check with your medical consultants and find out what in the world the doctor was doing. Thank you - RITA

Dear Rita: My medical consultants believe the doctor should be tested for HIS reactions because he sounds a little off his rocker.

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago my two married sisters and I were complaining about our husbands' quirks. Mom told us a story that made a big impression on all of us. I'd like to pass it on.

Mom said the night her last child was married (she has been a widow for years) she went back to her apartment and suddenly the emptiness of the place hit her all at once. She said it was really silly because her last-to-marry was a son who wasn't home much anyway. But suddenly she realized he wouldn't be home at all. And that was the awful part.

She told my sisters and me to stop picking on our husbands, that most of the things wives complain about are not worth mentioning. From that day on I stopped nagging and our marriage has been a lot better ever since. - ONE WHO LEARNED IN TIME

Dear One: Thanks for your letter. And now let's hope others learn from you.

Dear Ann Landers: A few weeks ago a friend invited our daughter (age 2) to a birthday party. The birthday boy was 3.

It was made clear that parents were welcome and they would be served refreshments along with the children.

I asked if the adults would be served cocktails and was told "No. This party is for the children."

My husband overheard the conversation and said, "I am not going." He made it plain that he didn't care about the drink, but he thought the hostess was most ungracious. I agreed and told the hostess how we felt.

If adults want a cocktail the hostess should be happy to serve them one any time. In our home we wouldn't dream of doing it any other way. We would like your views on this. - MRS. S.L.L.

Dear Mrs. S.L.L.: I am with the hostess.

It's a sad state of affairs when someone who does not serve liquor is considered ungracious.

A mother who decides against serving cocktails to parents attending the birthday party of a child has good sense, in my opinion. I applaud her.

Dear Charlie:

The article quoted below was written by Mrs. J. P. Strickland, wife of the assistant principal of a Reno, Nevada public school. This is the way so many American housewives feel today, that I thought maybe the women here in the Bootheel might enjoy this "sad, but true" situation.

"I AM A TIRED HOUSEWIFE"

I am tired of trying, in this land of abundant food, to balance my budget when milk prices jump three cents on the half - gallon, and meat which was 69 cents per pound goes up to 89 cents in just one week's time.

I am tired of staying home while my husband burns the midnight oil studying, so that he can make the next pay step-up -- only to find these added earnings gobbled up by increased taxes and rising living costs.

I am tired of "experts" calling conscientious mothers neurotic for insisting that their offspring toe the line.

I'm tired of attorneys and social workers and courts who continue to hand down candy-coated sentences because, they claim, the poor dear hoodlum wasn't brought up in the right environment -- an environment that half the world would be envious to share.

I'm tired of hearing of all the "isms" which are supposed to take the place of the ideals and ideas propounded by our God - fearing forefathers, who died that we might be free. I'm tired of having these liberties taken away from my children step - by - step in the name of social benefits.

I'm tired of being told that it's sissy or old hat to believe in God's way -- and that God is dead.

I'm tired of seeing our police officers ridiculed and criminals exalted during riots and "marches".

I am tired of begging people to help me in the home -- then having them turn me down because they might miss an unemployment check.

I'm tired of having to run to turn off my radio when smutty jokes come over the air, often under the guise of folk songs.

I'm also tired of having to censor my current magazines before letting my youngsters read them.

I'm tired of improving my property by painting and adding new fixtures, only to have my taxes doubled because of those improvements.

I'm tired of seeing the hurt look in the eyes of my children when they wear half-soled shoes to school while playmates whose parents are "on the dole" get shiny new shoes to flaunt.

I'm tried of seeing people who have saved diligently being penalized for their thrift while the ne'er - do - well is coddled with unearned benefits.

Yes, I'm sick and tired of seeing people with initiative and good old Yankee ingenuity pushed around while loafers are being paid to be slothful. I'm sick of this modern psychology which is so different from the Golden Rule and the Book of Proverbs.

I am tired of seeing this once wonderful God - fearing nation bowing to Satan's whims -- but I am not too tired to pray.

By Mrs. J. P. Strickland

Needless to say, I am in complete agreement with Mrs. Strickland.

Sincerely yours,
Doris I. Livingston

NEW MADRID -- Judge Erie Wright fined seven in magistrate court:

Linda Sue Graddy, charged with no driver's license, fined $1 and $10 costs.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE OUTSWINDLED HORSE PLAYER

Benny met a fraud in need who was no friend in deed. He told Benny that a horse race had been fixed and that if Benny would give him $100, he would bet the money for Benny on the fixed horse. As it turned out, however, the only fix there was, was the one in which Benny's fraudulent friend had been in before running into Benny. With the money safely in his pocket, he quickly became one of the Vanishing Americans never to be seen again.

Upon discovering that he had been taken, Benny deducted the $100 from his income taxes as a loss resulting from a theft as allowed by the Internal Revenue Code.

"I was parted from my money," he told a tax agent, "as deftly as if some crook had picked my pocket."

"Serves you right," was the agent's answer. "You were ready to become a party to a scheme to defraud others by taking advantage of a fixed race. Because it back-fired gives you no right to make the deduction."

With the deduction disallowed, Benny took the matter to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Benny to deduct his loss?

This is how the judge ruled: Benny won! The judge held that Benny never became a party to a scheme to defraud others since no scheme ever existed. It was only a pretense on the part of the thief to deprive Benny of his money.

TODAYS LEGAL POINTER:

Your mere presence at the perpetration of a crime, and nothing more, is not a crime. However, being arrested under such circumstances can be very touchy. You can save yourself a lot of aggravation, generally by letting your lawyer handle the situation right from the start before it becomes overly involved with explanations and complications.

Chaffee to Vote On Annexation

CHAFFEE -- The voters of Chaffee will go to the polls March 28 to decide the fate of the proposed annexation by the city of property owned by R. H. Capshaw.

Capshaw is a candidate for mayor and wishes the property annexed so that he can meet residency requirements.

The election had been slated for March 22 but was changed because the circuit court had not ruled on the issue.

If you're not using Zip Code—
you're not getting your nickel's worth

When you plunk down a nickel for a stamp, you should get the world's most efficient postal service in return.

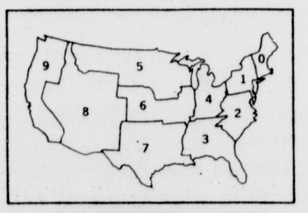

But—if you haven't added the Zip Code to the mailing address, you may not get all you are paying for.

Because Zip Code makes it possible for postal workers to sort mail faster and deliver by more direct routes. With Zip, they will use new electronic machines that "read" Zip numbers and sort mail fifteen times faster than was possible before!

That is why Zip Code is now the most important part of any mailing address. Always use it on every letter you write.

Include your own Zip in your return address, too. That makes it easy for others to Zip their mail to you. When you don't know a Zip Code, simply call your post office or look it up in their Zip Code Directory. Local Zip Codes can be found on the Zip Map in the business pages of your phone book.

It is so easy to use Zip Code. And when you do—you know you are getting your nickel's worth!

HOW ZIP CODE WORKS

Suppose the Zip Code is 60635. The "6" says it goes to the Midwest. The "06" narrows it down to Chicago. The last two digits—"35"—pinpoint the local post office. This eliminates many handling procedures. The letter is sorted faster, and sent more directly to its destination.

Mail moves the country—ZIP CODE moves the mail!

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE OUTSWINDLED HORSE PLAYER

Benny met a fraud in need who was no friend in deed. He told Benny that a horse race had been fixed and that if Benny would give him $100, he would bet the money for Benny on the fixed horse. As it turned out, however, the only fix there was, was the one in which Benny's fraudulent friend had been in before running into Benny. With the money safely in his pocket, he quickly became one of the Vanishing Americans never to be seen again.

Upon discovering that he had been taken, Benny deducted the $100 from his income taxes as a loss resulting from a theft as allowed by the Internal Revenue Code.

"I was parted from my money," he told a tax agent, "as deftly as if some crook had picked my pocket."

"Serves you right," was the agent's answer. "You were ready to become a party to a scheme to defraud others by taking advantage of a fixed race. Because it back-fired gives you no right to make the deduction."

With the deduction disallowed, Benny took the matter to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Benny to deduct his loss?

This is how the judge ruled: Benny won! The judge held that Benny never became a party to a scheme to defraud others since no scheme ever existed. It was only a pretense on the part of the thief to deprive Benny of his money.

TODAYS LEGAL POINTER:

Your mere presence at the perpetration of a crime, and nothing more, is not a crime. However, being arrested under such circumstances can be very touchy. You can save yourself a lot of aggravation, generally by letting your lawyer handle the situation right from the start before it becomes overly involved with explanations and complications.

(For personal guidance, see your local attorney)

Chaffee to Vote On Annexation

CHAFFEE -- The voters of Chaffee will go to the polls March 28 to decide the fate of the proposed annexation by the city of property owned by R. H. Capshaw.

Capshaw is a candidate for mayor and wishes the property annexed so that he can meet residency requirements.

The election had been slated for March 22 but was changed because the circuit court had not ruled on the issue.

WORD USAGE

In England, et as the past tense of eat has the highest prestige, the Catholic Digest states, and the best-spoken Englishmen will say, "He et his dinner."

"I commend those who have the concern and foresight to prepare such a stimulating agenda.-- -- (bulletin for ministers). (Bishop Lloyd C. Wicke, New York Area of the Methodist church.)

If you're not using Zip Code–
you're not getting your nickel's worth

When you plunk down a nickel for a stamp, you should get the world's most efficient postal service in return.

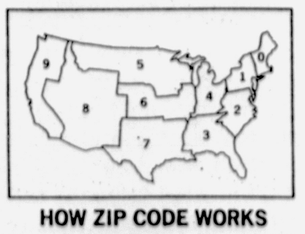

But–if you haven't added the Zip Code to the mailing address, you may not get all you are paying for.

Because Zip Code makes it possible for postal workers to sort mail faster and deliver by more direct routes. With Zip, they will use new electronic machines that "read" Zip numbers and sort mail fifteen times faster than was possible before!

That is why Zip Code is now the most important part of any mailing address. Always use it on every letter you write.

Include your own Zip in your return address, too. That makes it easy for others to Zip their mail to you. When you don't know a Zip Code, simply call your post office or look it up in their Zip Code Directory. Local Zip Codes can be found on the Zip Map in the business pages of your phone book.

It is so easy to use Zip Code. And when you do–you know you are getting your nickel's worth!

HOW ZIP CODE WORKS

Suppose the Zip Code is 60635. The "6" says it goes to the Midwest. The "06" narrows it down to Chicago. The last two digits–"35"–pinpoint the local post office. This eliminates many handling procedures. The letter is sorted faster, and sent more directly to its destination.

Mail moves the country– ZIP CODE moves the mail!

fired, under the CAP regulations, but he was kept on the job and actively campaigned to get Williams fired, by telling the board members "he just thought Williams should go, but he didn't want the job and wouldn't have it, if it was offered to him." But his was one of the first applications filed, after Williams was discharged. It is known that Williams desired a certain vacant building at Portageville for his home office, and caused the purchase of the building by a Portageville citizen with an agreement to rent it, only to be confronted by Mr. Thomason, at Poplar Bluff, Mo. (at the 1966 Missouri Cotton Producer's Ass'n. meeting.) with the suggestion that he should rent another vacant room, owned by an associate and aide of Mr. Thomasons, in campaigning for Hilary Bush for Governor in 1964, and Mr. Williams back-tracked on his agreement to rent the other building and proposed a lease of the one Mr. Thomason suggested. The terms of the lease exceeded the authority of DAEOC under CAP regulations, the record of the minutes will show it was never approved by a majority of the board, or by a majority when a quorum was present, and there is no approval, in writing, on record from Mr. Thomason. Some $7,000.00 to $9,-000.00 was spent on the renovation of the old room by DAEOC, which can never get its money back, even if it stays the full five years of the lease; $100.00 a month is paid to lessor, in addition to the cost of improvements.

The other assistant to Mr. Williams, it is believed, was a conspirator with the one mentioned above, to attain the dismissal of Williams. At least, it is known that he campaigned with the Negro members of the board for the election of the other assistant as Administrative Director. It is also known that in at least one instance he forced a local co-ordinator of a CAA (NSC) to keep an aide who wouldn't do a bit of work. He had come to Missouri, as a school teacher, from Arkansas, and, although claiming Portageville, Missouri, as his residence for several years, had never thought to get a Missouri license for his automobile - so he was recently picked up and fined in the New Madrid County Magistrate Court.

The original board of DAEOC consisted of some very fine citizens who resigned in disgust, when they could not learn what was going on, or what they were supposed to do. Other good people have been on subsequent boards and have given up for the same reason.

Now, it appears that there is a new board which intends to stop the foolishness and be ready to see that the Poverty Program in the Bootheel is correctly operated, on all fronts, if congress votes to continue the program. They have made a good start, perhaps there are other dead heads on the payroll who need to go, in order to get every possible dollar down to the needy people on the poverty level. One of the assistants who was discharged, has continued to give out press releases saying the program has assisted some 130,000 needy people in the Bootheel. Did you ever check the Blue Book? The last census shows that only 196,000 people in the whole of the six counties, and everyone should know each of the counties has lost population since 1960, unless it might be Scott County. Incidentally the Federal Department of Labor has done a fine job with its Manpower Development Program in Sikeston; in contrast to the mess-up of the Poverty Program.

The latest report is that the two assistants fired by the new DAEOC board are appealing their dismissals. There is no provision for such appeals under the Missouri law, which leaves such matters entirely at the discretion of the board members - no matter what Kansas City may say or guidelines may contain. Perhaps it is time, if necessary, to get Mr. Thomason before a Federal Court, over some of his rulings.

It is hoped that the new board will stand its ground and continue to do what it thinks best for a successful operation of the Poverty Program in the Bootheel, without giving in to coercion from any source.

Fortune does not change men; it unmasks them.

Suzanne Necker.

says its "real work" was done by the general counsel, J. Lee Rankin, and the 14 assistant counsels. As for the members of the commission, Manchester writes," the lustrous names of the seven appointees were for public consumption."

Manchester also is critical of actions of Secret Service agents before the assassination and immediately after the first shot struck Kennedy.

He makes these points:

1. On the night before the tragedy, "nine agents of the White House detail were out on the town. They started with beer and mixed drinks at the Fort Worth Press Club."

2. "At various times, they were joined by three agents of the 12-to-8 shift — who were officially on duty, assigned to guard the President's bedroom door."

3. A jet airplane pilot is grounded if he fails tests that measure his reflexes. "However, presidential bodyguards were not required to take" these tests.

4. When the first shot was fired, "most of the hunters in the motorcade identified the sound immediately as rifle fire, but the White House detail was confused."

5. Two agents were in the front seat of the presidential car. "They were in a position to take evasive action after the first shot, but for five terrible seconds, they were immobilized."

Manchester summarizes his indictment in the words, "The central fact was that the Secret Service had failed."

A publishers' note on the title page says, "Harper & Row wishes to make it clear that neither Mrs. John F. Kennedy nor Sen. Robert F. Kennedy has in any way approved or endorsed the material appearing in this book."

This reflects a bitter controversy which ranged for months between Manchester and the Kennedys. Last December, Mrs. Kennedy called the manuscript "tasteless and distorted" and brought suit to block publication. She demanded revisions and deletions. Three former aides to the senator said, after reading the manuscript, "We were talking about 144 changes."

Manchester replied that the reasons for demanding changes were "political" and constituted "an attempt to suppress vital facts."

Their acrimonious exchanges, erupting over a period of several months, received front-page reporting in newspapers from coast to coast. This, coupled with Look magazine's four-part serialization of the book, gave Manchester's story an unprecedented degree of advance publicity.

Perhaps as a result, booksellers report a large volume of advance orders.

Harper & Row said the first printing runs to 600,000 copies. There are indications that a second printing will appear almost immediately.

Six per cent of the net receipts on the first 100,000 sales will be retained by the publishers, they said.

An undisclosed part of the earnings accruing to both Manchester and the publisher has been earmarked for the Kennedy Library.

Literary agents estimate the book may earn around $3 million.

Manchester believes -- but states as fact—that Oswald went insane on Nov. 21, 1963, the night before Kennedy was assassinated. The author says Oswald's reason crumbled as the result of a quarrel with his Russian wife, Marina, from whom he was semiestranged.

She had been living in Irving, a suburb of Dallas, in the home of Ruth Paine, a friend. Oswald lived in a Dallas rooming house. He visited his wife and children on weekends.

Manchester wrote that on the night of Nov. 21, Oswald appeared to be watching television in Mrs. Paine's home. "In fact," the author says, "he was going mad."

Oswald appeared sane, however, to the police and other investigative officers who interviewed him after the assassination. The transcript of these interviews, published in the Warren Commission report, shows that Oswald told the same story to each of them. He answered certain questions but said he would not answer others until he could have an attorney with him. And he specified the attorney, "A New York lawyer whom he did not know" but who had defended some persons accused "of a conspiracy against the government."

Manchester says in his foreward he "felt entitled to record my opinions" and was "forming judgments."

But he does not pinpoint the passages in his book where fact leaves off and "opinion" or "judgment" begins.

He says that Mrs. Kennedy, contrary to McNamara and other federal officials, "hoped" a conspiracy had taken her husband's life. The book says, "for then there would be an air of inevitability about the tragedy; then she could persuade herself that if the plotters had missed on Elm Street they would have eventually succeeded elsewhere."

Manchester does not say whether Mrs. Kennedy told him this. He does not tell the reader whether it is fact or his judgment.

He said the talks might take any one of four forms:

—Direct talks between the United States and North Vietnam.

—Direct talks among these two and Britain and the Soviet Union as cochairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference.

—Direct talks among the United States, North Vietnam and members of the International Control Commission — Canada, India and Poland.

—Direct talks among the United States, North Vietnam, members of the control commission and the two cochairmen.

Thant stressed that these discussions would be aimed at reconvening the Geneva conference, and would deal solely with such matters as the time, place, agenda and who would take part.

Asked specifically whether he considered Monday's North Vietnamese statement as a rejection of his proposals, he said he did not wish to interpret or assess any of the replies. A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Hanoi had expressed doubts about Thant's peace plan.

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - Three $100-a-plate Republican dinners have been scheduled for Sept. 23, Dorman Steelman, Missouri's Republican state chairman, announced.

Steelman said they will be held simultaneously in St. Louis, Kansas City and Springfield. He made the announcement at a speech in Springfield.

River Floods Madrid Farms

NEW MADRID - "Of course farming Mississippi river bottom land is a great risk. If you had $10,000 to $15,000 in a crop that you could lose in a few days, you'd be scared but you wouldn't give up." It was William B. Henry a former farmer in the Mississippi river bottoms, speaking.

DALE BEAIRD, Collection Manager, First National Bank, has just returned from the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, where he has attended and completed the 1967 session of the School of Basic Banking.

The School of Basic Banking is sponsored by the bank associations of Nebraska, Kansas, and Missouri in conjunction with the College of Business Administration, University of Nebraska.

The School is a week session designed to cover all of the basic aspects of the banking profession.

The river has taken a rise from 12 feet March 7 to 31.7 feet Sunday. It is expected to fall this week, Simon Tanner, plan engineer of the Municipal Light and Power Co., said.

To the farmers involved, flood is a problem to cope with each year. To many farmers the flooding benefits farming by leaving a settlement on top of the land which fertilizes it.

Others may be delayed in planting their crops, which causes a crop loss.

The river's back water now covers about 10,000 acres of good farm land, but even under these circumstances a major crop loss has not been experienced since the flooding in 1937.

River bottom land is valued with the best. The present value of most of it is $500-600 per acre.

Flooding now is caused by high water coming out of the Ohio river about 60 miles north of here, Tanner explained.

One of my jobs with the British army in Egypt was to organize concerts. This meant not only getting players and singers together but also finding someone to type out the programs.

On one occasion we had scheduled a violinist and pianist to play Handel's Sonata in A Major. The orderly-room clerk got the particulars right, but gave them an unusually military spacing:

Sonata in A . . . Major Handel

fired, under the CAP regulations, but he was kept on the job and actively campaigned to get Williams fired, by telling the board members "he just thought Williams should go, but he didn't want the job and wouldn't have it, if it was offered to him." But his was one of the first applications filed, after Williams was discharged. It is known that Williams desired a certain vacant building at Portageville for his home office, and caused the purchase of the building by a Portageville citizen with an agreement to rent it, only to be confronted by Mr. Thomason, at Poplar Bluff, Mo. (at the 1966 Missouri Cotton Producer's Ass'n. meeting.) with the suggestion that he should rent another vacant room, owned by an associate and aide of Mr. Thomasons, in campaigning for Hilary Bush for Governor in 1964, and Mr. Williams back-tracked on his agreement to rent the other building and proposed a lease of the one Mr. Thomason suggested. The terms of the lease exceeded the authority of DAEOC under CAP regulations, the record of the minutes will show it was never approved by a majority of the board, or by a majority when a quorum was present, and there is no approval, in writing, on record from Mr. Thomason. Some $7,000.00 to $9,-000.00 was spent on the renovation of the old room by DAEOC, which can never get its money back, even if it stays the full five years of the lease; $100.00 a month is paid to lessor, in addition to the cost of improvements.

The other assistant to Mr. Williams, it is believed, was a conspirator with the one mentioned above, to attain the dismissal of Williams. At least, it is known that he campaigned with the Negro members of the board for the election of the other assistant as Administrative Director. It is also known that in at least one instance he forced a local co-ordinator of a CAA (NSC) to keep an aide who wouldn't do a bit of work. He had come to Missouri, as a school teacher, from Arkansas, and, although claiming Portageville, Missouri, as his residence for several years, had never thought to get a Missouri license for his automobile - so he was recently picked up and fined in the New Madrid County Magistrate Court.

The original board of DAEOC consisted of some very fine citizens who resigned in disgust, when they could not learn what was going on, or what they were supposed to do. Other good people have been on subsequent boards and have given up for the same reason.

Now, it appears that there is a new board which intends to stop the foolishness and be ready to see that the Poverty Program in the Bootheel is correctly operated, on all fronts, if congress votes to continue the program. They have made a good start, perhaps there are other dead heads on the payroll who need to go, in order to get every possible dollar down to the needy people on the poverty level. One of the assistants who was discharged, has continued to give out press releases saying the program has assisted some 130,000 needy people in the Bootheel. Did you ever check the Blue Book? The last census shows that only 196,000 people in the whole of the six counties, and everyone should know each of the counties has lost population since 1960, unless it might be Scott County. Incidentally the Federal Department of Labor has done a fine job with its Manpower Development Program in Sikeston; in contrast to the mess-up of the Poverty Program.

The latest report is that the two assistants fired by the new DAEOC board are appealing their dismissals. There is no provision for such appeals under the Missouri law, which leaves such matters entirely at the discretion of the board members - no matter what Kansas City may say or guidelines may contain. Perhaps it is time, if necessary, to get Mr. Thomason before a Federal Court, over some of his rulings.

It is hoped that the new board will stand its ground and continue to do what it thinks best for a successful operation of the Poverty Program in the Bootheel, without giving in to coercion from any source.

Fortune does not change men; it unmasks them.
Suzanne Necker.

An undisclosed part of the earnings accruing to both Manchester and the publisher has been earmarked for the Kennedy Library.

Literary agents estimate the book may earn around $3 million.

Manchester believes -- but states as fact—that Oswald went insane on Nov. 21, 1963, the night before Kennedy was assassinated. The author says Oswald's reason crumbled as the result of a quarrel with his Russian wife, Marina, from whom he was semiestranged.

She had been living in Irving, a suburb of Dallas, in the home of Ruth Paine, a friend. Oswald lived in a Dallas rooming house. He visited his wife and children on weekends.

Manchester wrote that on the night of Nov. 21, Oswald appeared to be watching television in Mrs. Paine's home. "In fact," the author says, "he was going mad."

Oswald appeared sane, however, to the police and other investigative officers who interviewed him after the assassination. The transcript of these interviews, published in the Warren Commission report, shows that Oswald told the same story to each of them. He answered certain questions but said he would not answer others until he could have an attorney with him. And he specified the attorney, "A New York lawyer whom he did not know" but who had defended some persons accused "of a conspiracy against the government."

Manchester says in his foreward he "felt entitled to record my opinions" and was "forming judgments."

But he does not pinpoint the passages in his book where fact leaves off and "opinion" or "judgment" begins.

He says that Mrs. Kennedy, contrary to McNamara and other federal officials, "hoped" a conspiracy had taken her husband's life. The book says, "for then there would be an air of inevitability about the tragedy; then she could persuade herself that if the plotters had missed on Elm Street they would have eventually succeeded elsewhere."

Manchester does not say whether Mrs. Kennedy told him this. He does not tell the reader whether it is fact or his judgment.

He said the talks might take any one of four forms:

—Direct talks between the United States and North Vietnam.

—Direct talks among these two and Britain and the Soviet Union as cochairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference.

—Direct talks among the United States, North Vietnam and members of the International Control Commission — Canada, India and Poland.

—Direct talks among the United States, North Vietnam, members of the control commission and the two cochairmen.

Thant stressed that these discussions would be aimed at reconvening the Geneva conference, and would deal solely with such matters as the time, place, agenda and who would take part.

Asked specifically whether he considered Monday's North Vietnamese statement as a rejection of his proposals, he said he did not wish to interpret or assess any of the replies. A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Hanoi had expressed doubts about Thant's peace plan.

River Floods Madrid Farms

NEW MADRID - "Of course farming Mississippi river bottom land is a great risk. If you had $10,000 to $15,000 in a crop that you could lose in a few days, you'd be scared but you wouldn't give up." It was William B. Henry a former farmer in the Mississippi river bottoms, speaking.

The river has taken a rise from 12 feet March 7 to 31.7 feet Sunday. It is expected to fall this week, Simon Tanner, plan engineer of the Municipal Light and Power Co., said.

To the farmers involved, flood is a problem to cope with each year. To many farmers the flooding benefits farming by leaving a settlement on top of the land which fertilizes it.

Others may be delayed in planting their crops, which causes a crop loss.

The river's back water now covers about 10,000 acres of good farm land, but even under these circumstances a major crop loss has not been experienced since the flooding in 1937.

River bottom land is valued with the best. The present value of most of it is $500-600 per acre.

Flooding now is caused by high water coming out of the Ohio river about 60 miles north of here, Tanner explained.

One of my jobs with the British army in Egypt was to organize concerts. This meant not only getting players and singers together but also finding someone to type out the programs.

On one occasion we had scheduled a violinist and pianist to play Handel's Sonata in A Major. The orderly-room clerk got the particulars right, but gave them an unusually military spacing:

Sonata in A . . . Major Handel
Jan Parrott.
